RETROSPECT

ORIGIN AND PROGRESS OF DISCOVERY,

BY SEA AND LAND,

IN ANCIENT, MODERN, AND THE MOST RECENT TIMES.

IN the early period of human hiſtory, when voyages and travels were not undertaken from the view of amuſement or inſtruction, or from political or commercial motives, the diſcovery of adjacent countries was chiefly effected by war, and of diſtant regions by commerce.

The wars of the Egyptians with the Scythians, mentioned in the priſtine pages of hiſtory, muſt have opened faint ſources of information concerning the circumjacent tribes. The Aſſyrian and Perſian empires could not have been conſolidated, without an increaſe of this knowledge; but which, like that acquired by the Perſian conqueſts, which ſeem to have embraced the northern part of Hindoſtan, is buried in profound darkneſs from the want of literary monuments. Under the Grecian empire of Alexander and his ſucceſſors, the progreſs of diſcovery by war is firſt marked on the page of hiſtory; and ſcience began to attend the banners of victory.

The opulence of nature was now to be diſcloſed; and Greece was aſtoniſhed at the miracles of India. The Romans not only inherited the Grecian knowledge, but, extending their arms to the North and Weſt, accumulated diſcoveries upon regions dimly deſcried by the Greeks, through the obſcurity in which the Phenicians enveloped their commercial advantages. Spain was unveiled by the Punic wars; and the eagles of the firſt Ceſar were ſeen in the extremities of Gaul, and in the ſouthern parts of Britain. The weſtern regions of Germany afforded farther ſcenes of enterpriſe, and the fleets of Rome viſited the Baltic.

On the ſouth the Egyptians had diſcloſed a portion of Africa, and maintained their ancient commercial relations with Hindoſtan; which, with its fine linens, diamonds, ſpices, and perfumes, has always been the very centre and focus of extenſive commerce. The rudeneſs of the natives of weſtern Africa led to the eſtabliſhment of colonies and conquefts; amongft which Carthage reared her proud head, rivalling Rome, the future empref of the world, and holding in fubjection tributary monarchies of Africa. But the deferts of that country forbad the progrefs of armies: and Nature feemed to have fet bounds to ambition. Africa is the only continent which never was conquered; and Alexander needed not to have ſighed for other worlds. Hence it is alſo the moſt ſavage of all the continents, and being unknown in war, is alſo unknown in peace. Oceans of ſand which permit no navigation, and where the ſhip of the deſert, as the camel has been called, faintly plods his way in the ſcanty and weary caravan, are impaſſable to armies with their neceſſary waggons and proviſions; expoſed beſides, from their very numbers, to the hurricanes of ſand, affording in an inſtant death and a grave. A portion of the army of Cambyſes, on their attempting a paſſage to one of the Oaſes, or fertile iſles, that emerge from the ſandy ſea, was devoured by this new tempeſt; and only a moment interpoſed between the appearance of a pompous army, and that of a hill of ſand, which covered for ever the joyous and victorious battalions. Africa may thus for ages continue unknown, unconquered, uncivilized, may continue her ſale of ſlaves with the Mahometans, if not with the Chriſtians; which affords however, as human life is only the choice of evils, ſome alleviation to the former horrors of internal warfare, in which the captive was reſerved as the favourite food of the conqueror; and the unborn infant was the turtle and veniſon of the Jaga. Even in China, in the ninth century, it appears from the Mahometan travellers that human fleſh was ſold in the markets; while we find no trace of ſuch barbariſm among the nations mentioned in the Scripture, the moſt ancient of written records; which, with many other circumſtances, leads to an inference that civiliſation irradiated from the centre of Aſia; and that it would be vain to ſeek for its commencement in China, or even Hindoſtan, eſpecially as the latter country was divided into ſmall kingdoms, ſo late as the age of Alexander, and ſeems to have imbibed its ſmall portion of the ſciences from its intercourſe with Egypt on the the ſouth, from the Perſian conqueſts on the north, which may even have imparted the Sanſcrit, a ſacred and claſſical language, like the Latin in Europe, and which late enquiries ſeem to evince to be a branch of the ancient Perſian or Gothic. The Grecian kingdom of Bactria may alſo have diffuſed ſome rays of ſcience among the Hindoos; while their ancient Bramins and Gymnoſophiſts reſembled the Magi of the Perſians, or pretended prieſts and magicians, common among all barbarous nations, who ſupply the want of knowledge by artifice, or operate deluſions by ſome ſkill in what is called natural magic.

Having thus attempted to eſtabliſh the progreſs and centre of diſcovery by conqueſt, which led to the moſt certain and permanent effects; it will be proper to aſſume with more detail the progreſs of ancient diſcovery by commerce, which led to a faint view of the countries, which conqueſt was afterwards completely to inveſtigate. The chart was deſigned by the ſhip, but the map was drawn by the ſword. The reports of merchants led Alexander to India, and Ceſar to Gaul and Britain. The peculiar products of Hindoſtan, the diamonds, ſpikenard, and ſpices, the tin of Cornwall, the amber of Pruſſia, were all known to the Greeks for ages before Alexander encountered Porus. An ancient author informs us that Ceſar was tempted to the conqueſt of Britain by the ſight of the pearls, which he probably received from the merchants of Gaul. At this day a little commerce ariſes from the pearls found in the mya, or what is called the horſe muſſel, not uncommon in the rivers of the north of Scotland, particularly the Erne, the South Eſk, and the Ythan; and we are not to wonder that the Gallic merchants traded ſo far, when we find that even after the fall of the Roman empire, veſſels from Gaul viſited the weſtern iſlands of Scotland, and brought tidings of an earthquake in Italy.* Thus avarice led the way to ambition; and the extenſion of commerce attracted the extenſion of war.

It is well known that two nations of antiquity contend for the palm of early commerce, the Egyptians and Phenicians, who ſhine in the firſt fragments of recorded knowledge. But Egypt was ſo fertile a country that its external relations ſeem always to have yielded to thoſe of the narrow and barren province of Phenicia, where the merchants of Tyre and Sidon rivalled the princes of the Eaſt. In modern times we have ſeen a marſh, interſected with ditches, and defended by ſtrong embankments, from a boiſterous and ſuperior ſea, riſe to a high rank among European ſtates; and with no native produce, except butter and cheeſe from its rich paſtures, (for even its linen is from Sileſia), diffuſe its commerce and colonies through every quarter of the globe, and diſpute even with England the empire of the ocean. Such ſeem to have been the Phenicians of antiquity; of whoſe commerce we find extenſive and laſting traces in Europe and Africa, while concerning that of the Egyptians few evidences appear. It ſeems to have been chiefly confined to Hindoſtan, and perhaps Eaſtern Africa. The learned Huet, biſhop of Avranches, has, with great care and erudition, compiled a hiſtory of ancient commerce at the deſire of the celebrated Colbert, miniſter of the finances of France, a moſt able and enlightened ſtateſman, who exerted every nerve to extend the commerce of his country. This great work, which is little known except to the learned, will be our chief guide in a view of ancient commerce, which forms the beſt and ſureſt foundation for that of ancient diſcovery, and as he is of remarkable accuracy, the learned reader is referred to him for the original ſources, as the nature of this eſſay attending a popular work, neither admits nor requires the conſtant quotations, neceſſary in a learned diſſertation, for the uſe of a few critical enquirers.

* In the ſixth century. Vita Columbæ apud Vit. Sanct. Scot. p. 78. In the twelfth, Engliſh, Flemiſh and French ſhips came to fiſh near the Iſle of May in the Firth of Forth. Ib. Vita Kentegerni.

Our profound author, beginning with the firſt traces of man upon the globe, obſerves that Cain, as an agricultor, muſt have exchanged with Abel, who was a herdſman, corn againſt meat and ſkins for clothing: and thus, perhaps the firſt murder aroſe from a quarrel originating in commercial intercourſe. He then proceeds to ſtate, that Tubal Cain, the firſt artificer of braſs and iron, muſt have exchanged the products of his labour for other articles; and that navigation muſt have been at a very low ebb before the flood, elſe ſhips of any ſize might have ſaved great numbers of mankind. Theſe ſpeculations ſhall be left to the learned biſhop, who ſeems to have reſolved, according to the Spaniſh proverb, "to leave nothing in the inkhorn." But he ſoon aſſumes the exuberance of his learning, and the ſplendour of his talents, to diſcuſs a moſt variegated theme with great erudition and preciſion.

"The Holy Scripture does not furniſh a more ancient example of commerce than that of the caravan of Iſmaelites and Madianites, to whom Joſeph was ſold by his brethren. They returned from Galaad bringing their camels laden with ſpices, and other precious merchandiſes of that country, to be imported into Egypt, where there was a great ſale, on account of embalming the bodies after death. The purchaſe which they made of Joſeph, and the ſale which they made of him in Egypt, to Potophar, the chief of the houſehold of Pharaoh, ſhews that their traffic was not confined to thoſe merchandiſes of Galaad. Their country was ſituated between Galaad and Egypt, regions abounding in peculiar products, which they exchanged from the one to the other, by conſtant journies, and aſſiduous labour. It muſt, nevertheleſs be remarked, that when Jacob, for the ſecond time, ſent his ſons to buy corn in Egypt, he ordered them to take the moſt precious articles to preſent to Joſeph, ſo as to procure his favour; and that thoſe merchandiſes were almoſt the ſame that the Iſmaelites and Madianites had brought from Galaad. Joſeph himſelf undertook a commerce of far greater importance; when, having divined from the dreams of Pharaoh, the ſeven years of famine, which were to afflict Egypt and Canaan, and even all the earth, he ſkilfully profited by the ſeven years of plenty, which were to precede them, and amaſſed a greater quantity of corn in the royal granaries than was ſufficient to extract all the ſilver and all the cattle of Egypt; and to turn all the funds of the country to the profit of the King, and thus furniſh ſupplies to adjacent countries."

The reader will hence perceive, that the exquiſite hiſtory of Joſeph includes, not only the firſt formal mention of commerce, but the ſlave trade, the bribery of a miniſter, the dreams of a monarch, the corn laws, the property tax, and the principles of monopoly.

But when our learned author argues from the ſilver which Joſeph puts into the coffers of his brethren, that money was then known, he forgets that no Egyptian coin has ever been found prior to the Ptolemies; and, as it is probable, that rupees were equally unknown unknown in Hindoſtan at that period, the ſilver muſt have been in bars, which were cut, as in China, according to the value wanted.

It would ſeem that the Egyptians chiefly enjoyed the commerce of the Eaſt by the Red Sea; and the Phenicians that of the Weſt, by the Mediterranean, although the latter were not wholly eſtranged from the commerce of the Eaſt, being in poſſeſſion of a port at the extremity of the Red Sea; as the Egyptians often availed themſelves of the mouths of the Nile, to trade to the ports of the Weſt, ſo that one of the ports of Tyre was called the Egyptian haven. Strabo has obſerved, that the firſt kings of Egypt, contented with the opulence of their country, interdicted foreign commerce; but this obſervation ſeems to apply to the trade by the Mediterranean, which might have become dangerous to Egypt from the eaſy acceſs to the whole kingdom, by the mouths of the Nile, and the navigable courſe of that river for the ſmall veſſels of that time; ſo that it became a matter of ſtate policy, not to open this defect to the eyes of ſtrangers. But the trade with Hindoſtan was very anciently known, both to the Egyptians and Phenicians; and Ptolemy Philadelphus only re-opened and improved this branch of commerce. Perhaps in the foundation of Alexandria, at a diſtance from the mouths of the Nile, one motive was to have a port which would not expoſe that ſacred and pervading river to the eyes of foreigners. The enmity of Alexander to Tyre, and her daughter Carthage, might alſo induce him to ſelect this ſituation between them; a ſituation which attracted a prodigious commerce for more than eighteen centuries, till the trade of the Eaſt was opened by the Cape of Good Hope, communicating by canals and the Red Sea, with the whole oriental world, and with eaſtern Africa; and, by the Mediterranean, with part of Aſia, Europe, and Africa. But the early commerce of Egypt by the Red Sea was impeded by the Idumeans, who only permitted them to uſe one ſhip in the intercourſe with Hindoſtan. The pretended conqueſts of the ancient kings of Egypt, Oſiris and Seſoſtris, in Hindoſtan, only indicate, according to our learned author, the origins of a great trade with that country, eſtabliſhing an influence ſimilar to conqueſts, of which examples are not wanting in modern times.

The chronological plan, purſued by Huet, has many inconveniences, while it would have been a ſuperior arrrangement to have exhibited in one view the commercial hiſtory of each country. Under the article India, he reſumes this Egyptian intercourſe; and obſerves, that when Cambyſes conquered Egypt, many Egyptians ſought refuge in Hindoſtan. As the Perſians then had, and ſtill retain, a moſt ſingular and rooted averſion to ſea voyages, founded on the unconquerable ideas of their ancient religion, the Perſian conqueſt ſuper-induced the ruin of Egyptian commerce, till it was revived by Ptolemy Philadelphus. Much information on this ſubject may be derived from Arrian's Periplus of the Red Sea, who inſtructs us, at the ſame time, that the ancient route was chiefly along along the ſhores of Arabia, and ſouthern Perſia, to the Indus, the pilot Hippalus having been the firſt who traverſed the wide ſea.

The Egyptians alſo traded with Ethiopia, by means of the Nile; having portable boats when they came to the cataracts. It is alſo probable that they viſited the eaſtern coaſt of Africa, following the ſhores as uſual in the early navigations. It is even likely that the name Aphrica, as impoſed by the Greeks, is only a ſlight alteration of the oriental word Ophir, a commercial name celebrated in Scripture for gold and other products, ſtill abundantly found in Sofala and other parts of eaſtern Africa; not more diſtant from the Egyptian ports on the Red Sea, than Tarſhiſh or Tarteſſus, the iſle of Gades or Cadiz, in Spain, from Tyre or Sidon.

Such are the obſcure notices concerning the ancient commerce of Egypt, which would require, indeed, a ſpecial diſſertation, to collect and collate the different authorities, and to weigh them in the ſcales of deliberate criticiſm. But the commerce of the Phenicians having been directed to the North and Weſt, is more intereſting to the European reader, and ſhall therefore be reſumed.

The commerce of the Phenicians has been celebrated ſince the earlieſt dawn of Grecian hiſtory. Herodotus informs us that they were even the carriers of the trade of Egypt and Aſſyria; as if they were the very inventors, not only of navigation and commerce, but of aſtronomy; the obſervation of the ſtars having been indiſpenſable to mariners before the compaſs was invented in the twelfth century, for it is mentioned by a French poet about the year 1200. This ineſtimable diſcovery had probably paſſed to the Weſt during the Cruſades, and exiſtence of the kingdom of Jeruſalem, for it had been long known to the Chineſe; and the obſcurity of the invention is probably owing to its having been gradually adopted by a few veſſels that viſited the ports of the Chriſtian kingdom of Jeruſalem. But before this improvement ſome knowledge of the ſtars was indiſpenſable to navigators, whence their various appearances are carefully noted in the ancient calendars or almanacs. Pliny, whoſe work is a Cyclopædia of ancient knowledge, and whoſe reading few ancient authors had eſcaped, regards the Phenicians as the inventors of commerce. Not contented with the wide expanſe of the Mediterranean, they entered the Ocean by the Streights of Gibraltar, and extended their trade to the North and South, nearly a thouſand years before the Chriſtian epoch. In the time of Solomon they were ſo famous that in emulation he ordered fleets, to follow their track to Tarſhiſh and Ophir. For the more commodious intercourſe with the Red Sea, that Prince founded a town as an intermediate mart; but this could not be Palmyra, which is in a very different direction, with temples dedicated to falſe gods; and the oriental tradition is of no avail, as it is well known, even from the Arabian Tales, that every remarkable monument is aſcribed to Solomon. In return for the advantages of trade, trade, Solomon aſſigned to the Tyrians, under the name of Hiram their king or chief magiſtrate, twenty townſhips, as an additional territory. But ancient Tyre, which was ruined by Nebuchadnezzar, and ſtood on the continent, muſt not be confounded with the more modern, taken by Alexander, which was raiſed upon a little iſle. The ancient commerce of Tyre has been illuſtrated by the Prophet Ezekiel. Among the moſt curious articles, were ivory from the iſles of Chittim; fine linen and embroidered work from Egypt; blue and purple from the iſles of Eliſhah; ſilver, iron, tin, and lead from Tarſhiſh (all which metals are ſtill found in Spain); ſlaves and veſſels of braſs from Javan, Tubal, and Meſhech; horſes and mules from Togarmah; ivory and ebony from Dedan; bright or poliſhed iron, caſſia, and calamus, from Dan and Javan; ſpices, precious ſtones, and gold, from Sheba and Raamah. Many of theſe countries might be illuſtrated from their products, but this would require a learned commentary; and the reader is meanwhile referred to the commentators. But it muſt not be forgotten that, both in ancient and modern times, the intermediate mart has often been confounded with the original country, eſpecially if very diſtant; thus Mocoa ſtones have been underſtood to be a product of Mocoa in Arabia, while they paſſed thither from weſtern India; and that fine fabric called muſlin, derives its name muſolino, from the town of Moſul on the Tigris, where it was brought by caravans from India.

Carthage was the daughter of Tyre, and ſucceeded to the ſplendours of the Phenician name in commerce and diſcovery. Situated at a great diſtance to the Weſt, her diſcoveries became more intereſting to the inhabitants of Europe. Her conqueſts in Africa and Sicily impreſs us with leſs attention, than thoſe in Spain, and her viſits to other portions of weſtern Europe. The tin, which Tyre had brought from Spain, Carthage, by a more remote progreſs, diſcovered in the ſouth of England; and the ancient empreſs of the ſeas unknowingly viſited the modern. The manufactures of Carthage ſeem to have been few, conſiſting chiefly of cabinet work, and of that prepared and ornamented leather of which they left the art in Africa, whence we ſtill derive our morocco. At the beginning of the third Punic war, which cauſed her ruin, Carthage counted ſeven hundred thouſand inhabitants; and in Africa alone not leſs than three hundred towns and villages obeyed her ſway. The Carthaginian territory not only included all the coaſt which extends from the greater Syrtis to the columns of Hercules,—a ſpace of more than three thouſand miles,—but an extent from the ſame columns towards the ſouth, where Hanno built ſo many towns, and eſtabliſhed ſo many colonies. In Spain, almoſt entirely conquered, Aſdrubal founded the celebrated city of Carthagena, deſcribed in ſuch glowing colours by Polybius.

Such was the Carthaginian empire, founded by trade, and matured by arms; the firſt empire which irradiated Europe, and infuſed ſome civilization in the Weſt. But the the neglect of literature, the want of the ſacred torch of ſcience, have left her glories in darkneſs. It has been well obſerved that the chief celebrity of any nation ariſes from her authors, who can alone perpetuate fame; and never was the ſuper-eminence of the pen over the ſword more completely diſplayed, than in the oblivion which has buried the tranſitory fame of Carthage, for ſeven centuries the empreſs of the Weſt. The Canaries or Fortunate Iſles, and the coaſt of Africa, as far as the ſtill remarkable promontory called the Chariot of the Gods, near the modern Cape Blanco, were viſited by Carthaginian navigators: and in the diſtant iſle to the weſt, mentioned by Diodorus Siculus and another ancient, you may trace Madeira with its pompous foreſts. But the natives of Africa ſhrunk from the northern cold, and the new regions of ſnow, a phenomenon which ſeems to have ſtrangely impreſſed their fancy, and led to fabulous reports concerning the denſity of the northern air. The voyage of Hanno towards the ſouth has been preſerved, yet of doubtful authenticity: that of Himilco along the weſtern coaſts of Europe, which would have been of ſingular curioſity, is utterly loſt, though quoted by Feſtus Avienus.*

Such is the real progreſs of the Carthaginians, as delineated by ancient authors. Imaginary writers, who miſtake their fancy for their memory, and aſcend in their literary balloons to build caſtles in the air, may dream of Phenician colonies and monuments in Great Britain and Ireland; but they do not ſeem even to have eſtabliſhed a factory in ſo northern a climate, foreign to their African habits and conſtitutions, and among warlike and jealous tribes. But, remarkable for their frugality of life and religious zeal, they ſeem to have imparted the worſhip of Baal or Belus, human ſacrifices; and the myſterious rites practiſed in the groves by a peculiar prieſthood, the noted Druids of the ancients, a ſyſtem which Ceſar informs us had recently riſen in Britain, and thence ſpread to Gaul. But its atrocious cruelty occaſioned its abolition in Gaul by Tiberius; and a ſimilar effect muſt have followed the firſt conqueſt of England by Claudius, ſo that in poſterior times we only find Druideſſes mentioned, an ill-choſen name for the witches or female magicians. But ſuch is the perverſion of poetry, that the ſanguinary rites, the human ſacrifices are forgotten; and the Druids are mentioned with veneration, while the ſacrifices to Baal, recorded in the Scripture, are objects of horror and deteſtation.

So jealous were the Carthaginians of the profitable trade in tin, that one of their pilots, perceiving his ſhip followed by a Roman veſſel, ran it among the rocks of Scilly, that the other might alſo periſh; which happened, and the pilot was recompenſed by his country. But tin, of which the mention is as ancient as Homer, was not the only traffic of

* Pytheas of Marſeilles, who lived in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus, ſeems to have followed the tract of Himilco. His account of Thule is quoted by Strabo.

England. Strabo adds not only lead and iron, but ſilver and gold. Both the latter metals are ſtill found in Cornwall, but remain unwrought and concealed, on account of one of the moſt unwiſe laws in the Engliſh code, which aſſigns theſe precious metals to the monarch, inſtead of a tenth, as in Spain and other countries. But the gold and ſilver may at that time have been confined to the north; for Cicero repeatedly mentions in his letters that theſe metals do not exiſt in Britain, as he learned from his correſpondence with his brother Quintus and with Ceſar himſelf, both then in the Iſland. In like manner the exiſtence of pearls had been denied, till Agricola diſcovered them in the north, as recorded by Tacitus. But Strabo, who lived in the time of Auguſtus and Tiberius, and whoſe deſcription is curious, as having preceded the firſt conqueſt by Claudius, (for Julius had only made a deſultory invaſion,) ſpecially mentions the precious metals as already ſtated; and adds hides and leather, and hunting dogs. Theſe Britiſh dogs, ſo celebrated by the ancients, appear to have been the ſleuth or ſlough hounds, or blood hounds of the middle ages, having been uſed in war by the Gauls, a purpoſe for which that dog alone could have been ſelected. They continued even in the ſixteenth century to be uſed in tracing and ſeizing robbers, eſpecially in the border inroads, but are now extremely rare, and perhaps only found in the environs of Neidwood Foreſt in Staffordſhire; whence one came that was ſhewn to the author. He ſtood higher than a large grey-hound, of a far thicker make, and ſtronger limbs; the back of a browniſh-black, the belly reddiſh, paſſing into white in the middle line; of great ferocity, and conſtantly chained. Two of theſe dogs might probably ſtruggle with a Caledonian boar or bear; but they alſo ſeem to have been uſed as guards at the Roman villas, near the gates of which CAVE CANEM, "Beware of the dog," cautioned the viſitors againſt their ferocity.

Among the products of England, Strabo alſo enumerates corn, for agriculture had been introduced by the Belgic ſettlers, and the fertility of the country ſupplied ſome for exportation.

The chief imports were ſalt, pottery, and works in copper, ivory, and amber: for the copper even of Cornwall ſeems to have eſcaped the rude natives, but would not long have been hid from Carthaginian avarice, if allowed to have founded even a factory, or to have employed their own people, ſuch proficients in all the arts of the times.

The conqueſts and commerce of the Romans ſucceeded thoſe of the Carthaginians; but an anterior and intereſting topic ariſes in the intercourſe between Britain and Gaul, which was naturally frequent in the moſt ancient times. The great trade of Marſeilles and Narbonne was ſometimes, though rarely, extended to Britain: but the Veneti, or people of Vannes, on the weſtern coaſt, ſeem to have been the maſters of this trade. The idea given of their power by Ceſar himſelf, ſurpriſes us in a Belgic tribe. When that great General conquered the Belgæ, he demanded hoſtages from the Veneti; but as their trade with Britain was very lucrative, and they underſtood his deſign of invading that country, they attempted to divert him from his purpoſe, by exciting commotions in Gaul. Ceſar deſcribes them as the moſt powerful tribe in that region, by the number and ſtrength of the veſſels they equipped, chiefly for the Engliſh trade; by the ſkill and experience of their ſeamen; by ſeveral ſmaller ports which were ſubject to them; and by the tribute which they raiſed on all the ſhips that navigated that ſea. Ceſar informed of this revolt, or rather noble attempt to reclaim their liberty and property, gave orders that ſhips ſhould be built in the Loire, and in the confluent rivers, adapted to that rough ocean, and very different from thoſe uſed by the Romans in the Mediterranean. The ſhips of the Veneti themſelves were choſen as models, being broader and flatter at the bottom, and higher both in poop and prow; conſtructed of more ſolid materials, bearing ſails of leather to reſiſt the force of the winds, and anchors attached to chains of iron; beſides being carefully ſeamed with ſea-weed, to prevent the planks from parting when dry. This ſingular picture of art, joined with rudeneſs, is one of the moſt curious in the whole hiſtory of navigation. The Britons, their allies, ſent a fleet to their aſſiſtance, ſo that they oppoſed to Ceſar not leſs than two hundred and twenty ſhips, well ſtored with all kinds of maritime ammunition, and proviſion. Meanwhile Ceſar had ordered all the ſkilful pilots that could be found to be aſſembled, with a great number of rowers, to man ſhips from the weſt and ſouth of Gaul, even from the Mediterranean. But Ceſar's fleet would certainly have been defeated, if he had not uſed a ſtratagem, by fixing ſcythes at the end of long poles, ſo as to cut the cordage which ſupported their ſails, ſo that their ſhips remained a prey to the Romans, and thoſe gallant merchants ſubmitted to the yoke of Rome. But as the power of the Veneti is imputed to their commerce with Britain, it is evident that this trade muſt have been of conſiderable conſequence. The exports from Gaul to Britain remain rather obſcure; but the culture of the vine and the olive were known to the Greek colonies in the ſouth; and as woollen clothes, and linen, and various works in iron, ſteel, and braſs, were known at the great fairs of Lyons, when ſixty nations or tribes are ſaid to have aſſembled for trade; and as Diodorus informs us, that the tin of Britain was carried on horſes through Gaul to Marſeilles and Narbonne, it might be that it was landed at Vannes, and that the exports to Britain were not only maritime, but collected by inland trade from all parts of Gaul, including even jet from the bottom of the Pyrenees, of which ſo many ornaments, and even entire and ſolid bracelets, are found in the tombs of Britiſh chieftains and ladies, even in the fartheſt north; for the Caledonians, though naked and tattooed, muſt have been covered with foreign ornaments, as the indigenes of America, and exchanged their pearls, a native and deſpiſed product, for the foreign and rare jet, which contraſted more with their white ſkins and yellow hair. Combs of ivory, mirrors of poliſhed metal, formed the toilette of the Caledonian nymphs who bounded over the mountains, or pierced through the foreſts, like the Dryades of antiquity.

For any commercial intercourſe between Britain and thoſe regions now called the Netherlands, and the weſtern parts of Germany, there is no evidence till a far later period. Even in the time of Caligula, the Germans ſeem to have known nothing of the ſea, or of commerce; advantages gradually imparted by the Roman conqueſts. Even in later times, the Caledonians derived their few arts from their ſouthern neighbours, the German ocean preſenting a formidable barrier, conquerable by fearleſs and invading warriors, but not by timid and cautious merchants.

The diſcoveries of the Carthaginians in the north, were ſucceeded by thoſe of the Romans, chiefly conducted by conqueſt. But before proceeding to the latter, it may be proper briefly to conſider the ſtate of commerce among ſome other nations of antiquity. The Greeks of Marſeilles and her colonies maintained an extenſive trade, their veſſels having viſited the weſtern coaſt of Africa; and Pytheas, one of their navigators, having performed a celebrated voyage towards the northern extremities of Europe. But the accounts are imperfect; the Greeks having conceived that incredulity concerning thoſe diſtant regions, was a mark of judgment and talent. Yet it might, perhaps, be found as veracious as that of Hanno along the weſtern coaſt of Africa; and the wonders might eaſily have been explained by natural phenomena, rather magnified and miſrepreſented, than falſified or invented. His Thule, at the diſtance of ſix days ſail from Britain, might, perhaps, be Iceland or Scandinavia.

The commerce of the ancient Perſians was conducted in Phenician ſhips, that great nation having a religious averſion to the ſea. The diſcoveries of the Perſians were by land; and they carried their arms to the north and eaſt, and conquered a portion of Hindoſtan. India and China, rather the objects of trade than ſeats of external traffick, were themſelves chief points of diſcovery by more enterpriſing nations. China, in fact, remained unknown till the time of Marco Polo, in the thirteenth century, and is reſerved for the account of modern diſcoveries. But the precious articles brought from Hindoſtan, either by ſea to Egypt, or by land to Perſia, excited attention and curioſity long before the age of Alexander, whoſe arms expoſed to enlightened Greece the real ſtate of that prodigious country. The voyage of Nearchus extended from the Indus to the Euphrates; and has recently been illuſtrated with care and ability. Ptolemy Philadelphus, King of Egypt, having reſtored the ancient intercourſe, and founded the town of Berenice, on the Red Sea, to facilitate the trade with India, the ſhores of that extenſive region, with the Iſle of Taprobane or Ceylon, and a part beyond the Ganges, as far as Pegu, the Golden Cherſoneſe of the ancients, were explored by Egyptian and Roman navigators. Large rivers, by affording entrance to veſſels, alſo gave ſome inſight into the interior country, which is conſequently laid down, with ſome reſemblance, by Ptolemy the Geographer, in the ſecond century, and in the maps which accompany his work, ſaid to have been drawn in the fifth by Agathodemon. As to the Peutingerian Tables, which pretend to give itineraries of India in a moſt diſtorted and unintelligible form, it has been ſhewn in another place, that they are a work of the thirteenth century, copied, without accuracy, from ſome more ancient drawings.

Such were at length the limits of ancient diſcovery in the Eaſt, which of courſe extended much farther by ſea than by land; the weſtern Alps of Tibet, and the vaſt deſert of Cobi, having remained unexplored, and aſſigned for many ages an impenetrable boundary.

The ſame work of Ptolemy, if accurately examined and collated with the collections of charts called African Pilots, and with other ſure guides, will intimate the utmoſt extent of ancient diſcovery in Africa to have been Cape Blanco, and the gulf to the ſouth of that promontory; while on the eaſt it extended to the Iſland of Pembo.

Returning to the diſcoveries in the weſt, Julius Ceſar having conquered, as already mentioned, the Veneti, who carried on ſuch an extenſive trade with Britain, was led to attempt the conqueſt of this Iſland. But the difficulties which he encountered, and its extent, ſuperior to what he had imagined, induced him ſpeedily to abandon an enterpriſe, which would have required many campaigns, and would have prevented thoſe political deſigns which required his proximity to Rome. Yet as Gaul was now wholly Roman, the Britiſh princes in the ſouth found it expedient, for the ſake of their commerce with that country, to court the amity of its victors by marks of attachment. Auguſtus and Tiberius wiſely reſtricted the boundaries of an empire, as large as ambition could wiſh or judgment hope to rule. Caligula, profligate to a degree of infanity, commanded a fantaſtic expedition to the Batavian ſhores, and returned with ſhells, his only trophies of the Britiſh ſea. The ſober Britons ſeem to have been diſguſted with the madneſs of the maſter of the world; and their contempt excited Claudius (the diſciple of Livy the hiſtorian) to the permanent conqueſt of the ſouthern half of the country.

But the ſtate of Britain, when it was firſt laid open to ſcience by the invaſion of Julius, deſerves more eſpecial conſideration. From Strabo it would ſeem that Craſſus, Lieutenant of Ceſar againſt the Veneti, viſited the weſtern part of Britain, and perhaps Ireland. Diodorus informs us that commerce had rendered the inhabitants of Cornwall leſs ferocious to ſtrangers; and from Tacitus we learn, that the ports of Ireland were more known and frequented by traders in his time than thoſe of Britain; probably becauſe the ſouth of England having been planted with Roman colonies, many articles formerly imported were manufactured at home; while the demand was continued in Ireland, which had no ſuch advantage. Nay even a rude coinage was uſed in Britain before it was invaded by Ceſar, in imitation of that of Gaul, where the Greek colonies introduced this commodious art: but it muſt have been confined to the Belgæ who were agricultors; yet this coinage is a ſingularity in their then barbarous ſtate, when their hovels were rudely conſtructed of wood, and no veſtige of architecture remains, except thoſe monuments idly called Druidical circles; the moſt remarkable of which is Stonehenge, near the capital of the Belgæ, and which ſeems to have been the place of the national aſſembly, as among the other Gothic nations. It is not a little remarkable, that not far from the city of Vannes, at Carnac, there is a grand Belgic monument of the ſame kind, and worthy of the greateſt commercial people among the Gauls. It conſiſts of not leſs than four thouſand ſtones, many as high as eighteen or twenty feet, diſpoſed in quinquuncial order, and in eleven rows *. In theſe erections the numbers of men employed muſt have ſupplied the defect of mechanics, as Ceſar mentions a trench of great depth and compaſs, ſo as to incloſe an inimical army, and finiſhed in a very ſhort ſpace by numbers and continued labour †. The uſe of levers and mounds might have raiſed theſe large ſtones; but the intention of the prodigious collection at Carnac ſeems inexplicable.

Among ſuch rude arts, the management of the tin muſt have been chiefly imparted by the Phenicians; but we do not poſitively learn whether it was exported in the ore, or in the metal. In the trade of the Egyptians with Hindoſtan, it is not improbable that the tin of Banca may have been known, and an iſle called Caſſitera, from its tin, is marked in the ancient maps of the Indian ſeas. But the Greeks and Romans drew their tin from the Carthaginian commerce with Britain.

It is a common error among antiquaries and travellers to dwell on a ſingularity, rather than univerſal practices, which eſcape obſervation. Thus the little boats of the Britons, covered with leather, have been ſuppoſed to have formed the ſole navy of the future miſtreſs of the ſeas; while in the conflict with the Veneti, already deſcribed, the Britiſh

† The enemy, being about ſixty thouſand men, formed a circle, facing to the centre, quite round the Roman intrenchment; and the more effectually to cut off all communication of ſupplies or intelligence from without, effected a line of circumvallation, conſiſting of a ditch fifteen feet wide, and a breaſt-work eleven feet high, extending over a circumference of fifteen miles. In this work, being unprovided with intrenching tools, they were obliged, as Ceſar reports, to cut the turf with their ſwords, and fetch earth in their cloaks. But having broke ground at once on every point of a circumference which their number was ſufficient to cover, the whole was accompliſhed in no more than three hours. – Ferguſon's Roman Rep. III. 133, from Cæſ. v. 41.

veſſels muſt have been nearly equal in ſize and ſtrength to thoſe of their allies, as boats would have been of no avail in ſuch an action. It is alſo remarkable that, on the coins of Claudius, Britannia is repreſented with the prow of a veſſel at her feet, implying her national ſymbol, like the lion of Africa, the crocodile of Egypt, and other adjuncts on the Roman coins.

The complete developement of the Britiſh iſlands was accompliſhed by the progreſs of the Roman armies and fleets in the north, and by the trade of the Britiſh and Gallic merchants with Ireland, which important iſland is delineated by Ptolemy with conſiderable accuracy. Roman fleets alſo viſited the Baltic, and the ancient maps include the ſouthern part of Scandinavia, with a fragment of the preſent Ruſſian empire in Europe. Roman colonies were planted in the weſtern parts of Germany, and gradual minute diſcoveries were added till the fall of the Roman empire in the weſt.

The glory of the Roman name feebly ſurvived in Conſtantinople till the middle of the fifteenth century; and the ſituation of that grand city rendered it a choſen ſeat of commerce. But maritime expeditions were little an object with the indolent and ſuperſtitious Greeks: and the range of ancient diſcovery ſhall now be cloſed with ſome obſervations on an important object, the various Routes to Hindoſtan, a country which has always attracted the commerce of the world.

One of the chief routes was that by Samarcand, and the river Oxus, which ran in its vicinity, and by which ſmall veſſels could paſs into the Caſpian Sea; and, remounting the Volga, diffuſe commodities in the north-eaſt of Europe. A land carriage of no great length might tranſport goods to the Euxine, eſpecially as the river Cyrus favoured the tranſport. Samarcand ſeems to have been a conſiderable mart even in ancient times, the goods being brought from India by caravans of dromedaries or camels of Bactria. But the camel ſeems then little uſed in Hindoſtan, being only adapted to ſandy regions, and the elephant requires too much food to be uſeful on commercial journies. The horſe is a native of Aſiatic Ruſſia; and the ſmall horſes of Tibet may have been uſeful in the mountainous parts.

Ammianus Marcellinus * ſpeaks confuſedly of a route by the country of the Arians; but he ſeems to have proceeded upon a vague report, inconſiſtent with geography. He alſo indicates another route from the country of the Seres, and paſſing through that of the Sacæ, a ferocious people, without towns. The name of ſerica is well known to have been derived from the Seres, or the people of Little Bucharia, and has been underſtood to be ſilk, but was probably cotton, eſpecially as Marco Polo mentions a fine gloſſy cotton as a ſpecial and abundant product of Little Bucharia. When an ancient poet

ſpeaks of the fleeces of the Seres growing upon trees, he undoubtedly means cotton. The tranſparent dreſſes of the Roman ladies, mentioned by other poets, were probably fine muſlin or gauze. In the time of Juſtinian, however, ſilk was well known, and ſilk-worms brought from the Eaſt.

Having mentioned the Seres, who formed one boundary of ancient diſcovery, it may not be unneceſſary to add that the Sinæ, who form another extreme people, have been recently demonſtrated by Goſſellin to have inhabited the weſtern part of Siam, their capital having been Tanaſerim. Dr. Robertſon has obſerved, from the Ayeen Akbery, that Cheen was the ancient name given by the Hindoos to Pegu, whence, perhaps, the Roman Sinæ. Coſmas alſo informs us that Taprobane, or Ceylon, was nearly at an equal diſtance between the Perſians and the Sinæ, which is juſt with regard to Siam, but by no means with regard to the neareſt port of the Chineſe ſhore, removed to double the diſtance, eſpecially in the coaſting voyages of antiquity.

The route of Cabul was convenient, becauſe a neighbouring river fell into the Indus, near the mouth of which was a great mart of Hindoo trade.

But the chief route ſeems to have been that of Candahar, by which the Indian products paſſed into Perſia. This mart alſo attracted merchants from Europe, as well as different parts of Perſia and the Eaſt. Even in modern times of the Perſian monarchy, the caravans of Iſpahan and Agra met at Candahar with thoſe from the coaſts of the Caſpian.

In proceeding to the diſcoveries of the middle and modern ages, there are two objects which ought to be impreſſed upon the reader, becauſe they have hitherto eſcaped the notice which their importance required. The firſt of theſe is the duration of the empire of Conſtantinople; and the other the foundation and progreſs of the Hanſeatic League.

The ſituation of Conſtantinople may be ſaid to command the trade of the ancient world, and the attention paid to commerce may be perceived from the code of Juſtinian; and though the Saracens in the ſouth, and the Turks in the eaſt, greatly reſtricted the bounds of the empire, yet the Jew Benjamin, who flouriſhed towards the end of the twelfth century, compares Conſtantinople with Bagdad, for the confluence of merchants from Europe and Aſia, while thoſe of Egypt brought the products of Hindoſtan. For a long period the only gold coins known in Europe were called beſants, from Byzantium or Conſtantinople, whence they paſſed into the weſtern currency, in the purchaſe of mercantile commodities. Many of the arts alſo flouriſhed in this capital, when they were extinct in moſt parts of Europe. If a Calif of Spain wiſhed to build a ſplendid moſque, he applied to the Grecian Emperor, who ſent architects, and even columns of marble. Sculpture declined, becauſe the Greeks did not allow of images; but painting ſtill delineated favourite ſaints, ſtill more perpetuated by Moſaic. Even painting in oil, idly ſuppoſed a modern modern invention, was familiar to the Byzantine Greeks; nor was it unknown to the Romans, as appears from the doors and windows of Herculaneum *. The art of engraving on ſtones and metals was alſo retained; and ſome beautiful ſeals ſeem the work of Byzantine artiſts. Our architecture was improved, or diverſified, from the ſame ſource; and the church and palace of St. Mark at Venice are ſpecimens of the Grecian art in the middle ages. Mr. Gibbon's work may be conſulted for the ſtate of the commerce; but as no diſcovery of importance was achieved, it is unneceſſary here to enter into a detail.

The Hanſeatic League, one of the moſt remarkable phenomena in the hiſtory of Europe, was the firſt maritime power for three centuries, ruling paramount in the Baltic and German ſeas, driving the kings of Denmark and Sweden from their thrones, and reducing Norway to complete ſubjection. This perpetual alliance, to defend the freedom of trade againſt the tyranny and extortion of rude princes and potentates, was founded in 1241; and not leſs than ſixty towns on the Rhine, with Bremen, Lubec, Hamburg, were ſoon united on this formidable alliance. The eaſtern commodities were chiefly brought from Venice, by an inland route to the Rhine. But even at a prior period the ſouthern ſhores of the Baltic began to be enlightened with commercial intercourſe; and Julin, a city of great extent and commerce, on the right bank of the Oder in Pomerania, was deſtroyed by Waldomar I. King of Denmark.

The diſcoveries of Marco Polo, in the thirteenth century, were far more important than thoſe of Colon, or Columbus; yet had not that ſtriking novelty which aroſe from the boldneſs of the enterpriſe. But before proceeding to this prodigious acceſſion to geography, it is proper to ſtate the intermediate progreſs of diſcovery.

In the ninth century two Arabian travellers explored the countries as far as China; and their work, publiſhed by Renaudot, is not a little curious. The Arabian geographers began gradually to acquire more knowledge concerning Aſia and Africa; but their works remained unknown to Europeans, obliged to be ſatisfied with the information obtained from Ptolemy.

In the ſame century, Alfred, King of England, not only preſerved the voyage of Ohter, but ſent Suithelm, Biſhop of Shireburn, with a preſent to the ſhrine of St. Thomas in India, near Madras, on the coaſt of Coromandel. That great monarch ſeems rather to have been impreſſed by political than ſuperſtitious views; for, as it was neceſſary for his meſſenger to paſs by Ceylon, then a great mart of eaſtern trade, it is natural to conceive, that information on this ſubject was expected and required.

The Cruſades, which began in the eleventh century, and the eſtabliſhment of the kingdom of Jeruſalem, contributed not a little to diffuſe a new light over the page of European knowledge. The centers of trade, with Conſtantinople and Alexandria, were Venice, Piſa, and Genoa; but theſe cities, only intent on commercial ſpeculation, were ſtrangers to the paths of ſcience and diſcovery. The importation of the compaſs during the cruſades of the twelfth century, ſcarcely prevented the timidity of coaſting voyages, except in the Mediterranean, as in the paſſage from Genoa to Alexandria, till Colon ſet the example of daring the open ocean. Unexpectedly, therefore, the new diſcoveries were by land. The prodigious conqueſts of Zingis, Emperor of the Mongols, had ſhaken the whole continent of Aſia, and vibrated even to Europe. His powerful ſucceſſors might either cruſh the feeble kingdom of Jeruſalem; or might, by a powerful diverſion, deliver it from the Saracens. A convocation was held at Lyons, in 1245, by Pope Innocent IV., and two humble friars were diſpatched to the conquerors of the Eaſt, whoſe power now inſured a paſſage through barbarous countries: and the meſſengers, travelling by the north of the Caſpian, arrived, after a laborious journey, at Karakum, the ſeat of the Mongol Emperors, in the centre of Eaſtern Aſia, probably ſituated on the river Orchon, which flows into the Selinga. Theſe humble friars firſt reported the exiſtence of the prodigious empire of Cathay or China, embracing a third part of the human race.

Within a few years St. Louis, the pious King of France, ſent a meſſenger, called William of Ruyſbroek, to Karakum, probably with an intention to excite the Mongols to aſſiſt the Chriſtians againſt the Saracens. The accounts of theſe three meſſengers are preſerved; but are brief, feeble, and obſcure, when compared with the travels of Marco Polo; and they are confined to a ſmall portion of his diſcoveries.

It is to Marco Polo that we are indebted for the diſcovery of one-half of Aſia. This noble Venetian ſeems to have been born in 1251, when his father and uncle were abſent in the Eaſt. They returned in 1269, having met with ſuch ſucceſs, that they were not only induced to repeat their journey, but to aſſume the young Marco as a companion. They ſet out on this memorable journey in 1271 or 1272; and returned in 1297, after an abſence of twenty-ſix years, during ſeventeen of which Marco had been in the ſervice of the Mongol Emperor. The travels of Marco Polo appear to have been dictated by him to one Ruſtigielo of Piſa, in the year 1299, in the priſon of Genoa; where that great traveller was then confined, probably in conſequence of the terrible defeat of the Venetian fleet, on the 8th of September 1298, in which the Genoeſe took eighty-five ſhips, and 7400 priſoners, among whom were the Admiral and many perſons of diſtinction. Peace was re-eſtabliſhed, and the priſoners reſtored, towards the end of the year 1299.

It was natural to ſuppoſe that Marco Polo ſhould dictate his travels in his native tongue, the Venetian dialect of the Italian. There was, accordingly, not only a manuſcript in that dialect preſerved in the family of Soranzo, but an edition at Venice 1496, and another at Trevigi 1590, in the poſſeſſion of the author of this Introduction. Meanwhile theſe important travels have only been known even to the learned by a moſt inaccurate and mutilated tranſlation into Latin, by one Pepuri, an ignorant Dominican friar, towards the end of the fifteenth century; and which even Ramuſio has been contented with tranſlating into Italian, in his celebrated collection of voyages and travels. That this compiler, living in Venice, ſhould have been a ſtranger to the original work, and ſo negligent of the fame of his country and countrymen, is ſufficient of itſelf to injure the credit of his collection, which muſt ever be conſidered, in this and many other inſtances, as more remarkable for elegance than fidelity. It is to be regretted that the Venetians, remarkable at all times for commerce and intrigue, have never produced one poet, and ſcarcely an author of any name, except Polo: and it is to be hoped that, if genuine learning were to dawn among them, their firſt care would be to publiſh a ſplendid edition, compared with all the manuſcripts of the original work of this great traveller.

Theſe particulars being premiſed, as eſſential to the due conſideration of the ſubject, a general view ſhall now be given of the diſcoveries of Polo.

The firſt eight chapters of the original work are not ill employed by Polo, in authenticating the ſources and credit due to ſuch new and various information as he had to communicate; and which, if abruptly entered upon, might have induced the reader to reject the whole as a romance. He ſtates, therefore, that his father and uncle, Nicolas and Matthew, having long reſided at the Mongol court, were deſired by the Emperor to conduct an envoy whom he ſent to the Chriſtian Pontiff. But this envoy having died on the route, his father and uncle continued their journey to Italy; whence they determined to return with their kinſman Marco, but were three years and a half on their journey, on account of the wide rivers, mountains, and ſtormy climates. The young Marco ſoon learned the four chief languages ſpoken in the Mongol dominions; and by this proficiency, and other aſſiduities, became ſo highly favoured, that he was ſent upon an embaſſy which laſted fourteen months. This embaſſy, and other employments in the ſervice of the Chan, during ſeventeen years, enabled him to collect accounts concerning many Eaſtern countries, eſpecially as the monarch was himſelf very inquiſitive on theſe ſubjects; and Marco thought it his duty to take notes of every thing curious, to pleaſe his royal maſter. At length the travellers are permitted to paſs from China to India by ſea, as ſervants of the Chan, obtaining an eſcort by land from Hindoſtan to Trebezond; whence they paſs, by Conſtantinople and Negropont, to Venice, arriving in 1297. Polo then adds, that this introduction is premiſed, in order to certify the reader of the authenticity of theſe travels.

He then begins his intereſting deſcription with ſome account of Little Armenia, and of Trebezond, near which he ſaw flocks of partridges tamed like poultry. Turcomania and the Greater Armenia follow, and the neighbouring province of Georgia, called Gruzia by the Orientals, is alſo deſcribed. But now proceeding to the South, he mentions Moſul, a noted mart in his time for the fine Indian cottons, thence called muſlins, and ſpices, probably brought by ſea through the gulf of Ormuz, or by land through Candahar. There are curious details, omitted by the ignorant friar, concerning the manufactures and commerce of Bagdad, eſpecially that with India by Baſſora.

Next follows an account of Tauris or Tebriz, and of Perſia. His town of Cormos, with a port rich in Indian traffic, is probably Ormuz. But, thus arrived in the ſouth of Perſia, he defers a deſcription of India till another part of his work; and returns to the north-eaſt of Perſia, deſcribing Badacſhan and the precious Balay rubies. Thence paſſing the mountains of Belur, he arrives at Caſhgar, or the country of Cotin, which abounding in fine cotton, probably gave name to the article.

Polo now unknowingly enters upon ground totally loſt to the ancients, by an account of the great deſart of Cobi. The province of Tangut is followed by the city Etzina, at the beginning of a ſandy deſart, ſpreading towards the north, and requiring proviſion for forty days. This is ſucceeded by the town of Karakum, and an intereſting account of the manners of the Mongols.

After inſerting ſome miſcellaneous information concerning the towns and diſtricts of Tangut, a ſtriking deſcription is given of the magnificent Pekin, called by the Mongols Cambalu or the city of the Chan. This deſcription ſurpaſſed the belief of the Europeans of his time, but is now found to have been veracious. While his obſervations are even directed to the coal uſed in the north of China, it has been accounted ſurpriſing that he makes no mention of the great wall. The romantic and inaccurate Prevoſt, partly tranſlator from the Engliſh, and partly author of the Hiſtoire Generale des Voyages, hence argues, that Marco Polo never was in China; while we know, from his own accounts, that he was governor of a city there for three years. It would ſeem that that enormous monument, the freſhneſs of which is remarked by travellers, was of comparatively modern erection. It is unknown to any Arabian geographer of a remoter date than four centuries; and Mr. Bell, in his judicious travels, ſays, that the wall was built about 600 years before his time, to defend the country againſt the incurſions of the Mongols. It is therefore very probable, that it was built after the Mongol power began to decline; and of courſe after the departure of Polo.

Having proceeded upon an embaſſy of fourteen months, as before-mentioned, he deſcribes ſeveral provinces of China, to the ſouth and weſt, probably as far as the preſent Birman empire. The city of Nangui having been taken by the induſtry of the three Venetian travellers, who conſtructed machines for throwing ſtones, the Chan aſſigned the government over to Marco Polo, who retained it for three years. The remainder of his deſcription of China diſplays that progreſs of civilization, and that population, which has always ſurpaſſed the belief of Europeans. The account of Japan ſo much excited the attention of Colon, that it was one motive of his expedition; eſpecially the great number of iſlands in the Pacific and Indian oceans, as he imagined that ſome of theſe iſlands muſt approach to the weſtern coaſt of Europe, the erroneous longitudes of Ptolemy having extended his Aſia one-third more to the eaſt than modern obſervation has aſcertained. It includes alſo the extreme boundary of our great traveller's diſcoveries; and for theſe reaſons ſhall be here extracted entire from the original Venetian copy.

" But I will now be ſilent concerning theſe countries, and proceed to ſpeak of India, in which I, Marco, remained for a long time; adding at the ſame time the wonderful things of this globe. I will firſt begin with the iſland of Cimpagu (Japan), which is in the ocean towards the eaſt, diſtant about fifteen hundred miles from the continent; being a large land, inhabited by well-made and handſome people, who adore idols. They have a king, who pays tribute to no other; and ſpeak a peculiar language. Here is found abundance of gold, but it is not permitted to be carried out of the iſland, whence few ſhips and little merchandiſe arrive there. The ſovereign of the country has a palace of wonderful magnificence, being all covered with thick plates of fine gold, and the frames of the windows are of the ſame metal. This iſland alſo abounds with precious ſtones, and vaſt riches. The great Chan, learning the opulence of this iſland, ſent two of his barons to conquer it, with a prodigious number of ſhips laden with cavalry and infantry, and an abundant ſupply of proviſions. One of theſe generals was called Abatan, and the other Vonſaincini. They left the port of Caicon and Gunſai, and proceeded to Cimpagu, where they landed and ravaged the plains: but envy and jealouſy ariſing between the two leaders, ſo that what the one wiſhed, the other oppoſed, they took no city, and only one caſtle, of which the garriſon, which would not yield, was cut to pieces, except eight men, who could not be hurt with ſteel, becauſe each had a precious ſtone of enchantment fixed in his arm, between the ſkin and the fleſh. This being reported to the generals, they were killed with clubs of wood; and the precious ſtones brought to theſe officers. One day it happened that a violent northerly wind aroſe, ſo that from fear that the fleet ſhould be wrecked, all returned to the ſhips, and ſailed to an iſland at the diſtance of about ten miles; but the wind became ſo tempeſtuous that many of the ſhips were wrecked, and the men eſcaped to land; while the other ſhips returned home. Thoſe who had eſcaped to the land were about thirty thouſand, who were all ſuppoſed to be loſt. When the ſea had become calm, the king of the iſland went with many ſhips to ſeize theſe invaders; but having landed with all his people, the Tatars made an unexpected turn, and ſeized the ſhips of the king, who was left in the iſland with his people. Proceeding to Cimpagu, the Tatars landed, diſplaying the royal banners they had found in the ſhips, and approaching a city, the gates were immediately opened. The Tatars entering, ſacked the whole, and even the women were ſerved as at Verona. Immediately the king armed armed ſhips, and raiſed a new army to beſiege the city. The Tatars receiving no ſuccour, after a defence of ſeven months yielded on terms. This happened in the year 1269.

" In this iſland are idols, ſome with the head of a wolf, others of a hog, a ram, or a dog. Some have one head with four faces; others three heads on one neck; others the head under the ſhoulders; or one upon another; ſome having four arms and others ten. That idol is reputed the handſomeſt which has the moſt arms: and if aſked why they make theſe idols in ſuch diſtorted and different forms, their anſwer is, the cuſtom was handed down by their anceſtors. When theſe iſlanders capture any man or woman who is not of their nation, if they have not money to ranſom themſelves, they are ſlain, their blood is drank, and the body afterwards eaten. This iſland, as already mentioned, is in the great ocean. And according to the report of ſkilful pilots and mariners who frequent theſe ſeas, there are ſeven thouſand four hundred and forty-ſeven iſles, of which the greater number is inhabited. And on all theſe iſlands there is no tree which is not odoriferous, does not bear fruit, or is not uſeful in other reſpects. There is alſo produced abundance of white pepper: and a year is required to ſail from the province of Mangi, the reaſon being that there reign two continual winds, the one during the winter, the other during the ſummer."

The remaining deſcriptions refer, ſo far as can be conjectured, to regions on the ſouth-weſt of China, as Siampa, and the large iſland of Borneo, and ſeveral other iſlands in that direction, ſuch as Java and Sumatra. Ceylon is afterwards mentioned; and he ſoon proceeds to deſcribe the vaſt country of Hindoſtan.

Not contented with theſe important diſcoveries in Aſia, he draws the veil from a portion of Africa; and Madagaſcar riſes to view for the firſt time, with a ſmall portion of the neighbouring continent. But he ſoon returns to the information he had received concerning the north of Aſia; and mentions the new kingdom eſtabliſhed by the Mongols in Siberia. The ermines, and other products of the remote north, and even the ſledges drawn by dogs, do not eſcape his notice; and beyond, he juſtly ſays, that all is ice in the winter, and all is mud in the ſummer.

Such were the ſurpriſing diſcoveries of Marco Polo, adding about one-half to the then known world! Amid ſcenes of ſuch novelty, amid ſuch treaſures of nature and art, and amid the ignorance and barbarity of Europe, it is no wonder that our traveller, eſpecially in the fervour of youth, was dazzled with ſuch a prodigality of ſplendour, and has magnified ſome objects beyond their real number, value, or magnificence. Philoſophical travellers did not appear till a recent period; but even theſe have been amazed with the civilization and population of China; and the European reader believes, but is not convinced. The candid will therefore make allowances for ſome calculations, not reconcileable with the ſtrictneſs of modern arithmetic; and for the amplification of ſome objects, particularly thoſe of which the author could only hear by report, the hyperboles of the oriental ſtile having impoſed even on moſt enlightened travellers at the moſt enlightened periods. Thus Sir George Staunton has, from the Chineſe documents, eſtimated the population of China at three hundred and thirty-three millions; forgetting the attachment of the Chineſe to the number three: and from the beſt authorities, carefully compared with each other, it may be reduced to two hundred and thirty millions; ſtill more than a third part of the human race. Some exaggerations, therefore, will never injure the honeſt fame of Polo, nor detract from the merit of the general maſs of information, which, though unhappily reſtricted to leſs than a hundred ſmall pages, is prodigious and wonderful.

The accounts of Polo excited the curioſity, or the zeal, of a Franciſcan friar called Odorico. Embarking in a Venetian veſſel, he arrived at Trebezond in 1317, and ſpent thirteen years in diſtant eaſtern countries; but his accounts are chiefly copied or diſtorted from thoſe of Polo. This charge ſtill more ſtrongly affects the noted Engliſh traveller, Sir John Mandeville, who ſeems never to have proceeded beyond the Holy Land, where he gathered ſome very ridiculous tales; and upon his return in 1355, ſupplied his own deficiency of adventure and information from the rich pages of Polo, being as bold a plagiariſt, as he was a timid traveller. He has even ſtolen from Pliny the names and fables of ancient geography. His fictions are not mere exaggerations of realities, but inventions of an imprudent and erring imagination, ſuch as giants of fifty feet in height, and a thouſand other tales ſurpaſſing even childiſh credulity. It is no wonder, therefore, that his work has met with univerſal and deſerved contempt; but might be laughable if printed in its due place, — among the imaginary voyages and travels.

About the year 1335, Pegoletti, an Italian, compoſed a ſyſtem of commercial geography of conſiderable curioſity and importance. The title is, " Of the Diviſion of Countries, and of Meaſures, and Merchandiſes, and other Things neceſſary for Merchants to know in the different Parts of the World." He preſents the route to Cathay or China by Azof, Aſtracan, Urgentz, Otrar, &c. partly performed by camels, partly with aſſes, and afterwards with horſes. He confirms the curious diſcovery of the paper-money uſed in China, as mentioned by Polo. The work of Pegoletti is only to be found in a rare publication, intituled, Della Decima e delle Altre Gravezze, which bears to have been printed at Liſbon and Lucca, 4to. in 1776, and the following years; but ſeems to have been really printed at Florence, the documents concerning the Florentine trade being of ſuch ſingular curioſity and importance, that without the peruſal of this work, no juſt ideas can be formed concerning the hiſtory of commerce in the middle ages. The production extends to three volumes; but the third, which contains the work of Pegoletti, is often wanting.

The great Portugueſe diſcoveries by ſea being about to open upon us, in the fifteenth century, it is unneceſſary to dwell on minute travels. The great empire of Ruſſia muſt be added to the other important diſcoveries of Polo, but a fuller account was given by Barbaro Barbaro in 1436. This great country ſeems to have been reſerved for the commercial advantages imparted by the Engliſh, who had failed in any former little attempt at diſcovery. Chancelor, who went with Sir Hugh Willoughby in the following century, on the imaginary north-eaſt paſſage to the opulent regions of Eaſtern Aſia, unknowingly diſcovered an object of equal conſequence. For, entering the White Sea, he found himſelf in the empire of Ruſſia; and travelling to the court at Moſcow, he opened a trade which has continued of radical importance to both countries.

But to reſume the chronological progreſs, by the diſcoveries of the Portugueſe in Africa. It has already been ſeen, that the knowledge of the ancients did not extend beyond Cape Blanco; the chariot of the gods ſeeming to be the Montagne Ronde, in the map of La Crenne's voyage, 1775. The Arabs had made conſiderable diſcoveries in Africa; but, from ignorance of their language, they were loſt to Europeans. In the beginning of the fifteenth century the Fortunate Iſles, or Canaries, were refound, and ſettled by a French adventurer. Madeira was diſcovered in 1418; but was probably that beautiful iſland in the Weſt to which a Phenician ſhip was driven by a gale, and reported to be of ſuch exquiſite climate and fertility, that the Carthaginians, jealous of their ſcanty population, promulgated a law againſt emigrations: yet the tradition ſeems to have paſſed on for many centuries, for we find ſome of the old Iriſh ſaints ſeeking after a beautiful iſland in the Weſt, which they underſtood to be ſo ſituated with regard to their own country.

The dangerous currents on the African ſhore, which induce modern navigators to ſeek the open ocean, oppoſed a formidable barrier to the firſt diſcoverers, who retained the ancient plan of ſailing along the coaſts. At length, in 1433, Cape Bojador was ſurmounted; and the impulſe was ſuch, that other diſcoveries followed in ſucceſſion. The iſles of Cape Verd were diſcovered in 1446; and, in 1449, the Azores, which, from the relative poſition, properly belong to Europe. The equator was paſſed in 1471; and in 1486 the Cape of Good Hope was firſt ſeen by Diaz; but that great navigator, encountering a tempeſt, returned without attempting to double that famous promontory; an enterpriſe which was reſerved for Vaſco de Gama, who, in the end of the year 1497 and beginning of 1498, not only paſſed the Cape of Good Hope, but explored a part of the eaſtern coaſts of Africa, whence he paſſed to India, and arrived at Calicut, on the weſtern or Malabar coaſt; a voyage deſervedly celebrated as of great boldneſs and extent.

But, ſix years before, the iſlands of America had been diſcloſed by the celebrated voyage of Colon, or Columbus; and we muſt return to view the progreſs of diſcovery in that great continent. Some northern extremities had been explored, at an early period, by the bold navigators of Scandinavia. Greenland, now univerſally allowed to form a part of that continent, was diſcloſed in the year 982: and Vinland in 1003; a country ſo called from its wild grape or currant, and which ſeems to have been a part of Newfoundland. The colony planted in Vinland by that hardy people was ſoon deſtroyed ſtroyed by inteſtine diviſions; but that in Greenland continued till navigation was impeded by the encroachment of the Arctic ice. That it was on the eaſtern coaſt, is evinced from the ancient accounts publiſhed by Torfæus, particularly as we are told, that in the middle of the paſſage two mountains were diſcernible, the one in Iceland, and the other in Greenland. Torfæus has even given a map of the ſettlement; and the Daniſh monarchs repeatedly ſent veſſels to penetrate, if poſſible, to this unhappy colony, left to periſh between mountains of ice on the one hand, and ſeas of ice on the other. A German writer has thought proper to argue, in oppoſition to all the ancient facts and authorities, that it was on the weſtern ſhore, a part ſtill open and well known; as another German author has argued, that the pyramids are merely ſolid rocks reduced to form: but a general reader will eaſily diſcern a peculiar caſt of mind in many writers of that country, which leads them to ſtrange paradoxes and a kind of fanatical enthuſiaſm, in treating even of ſubjects where cold truth alone is valuable; and which they idly ſuppoſe to be proofs of talent and philoſophy, while they only evince imbecility and want of ſcience.

The Spaniſh fable concerning thoſe who fled from the conqueſt of the Moors, A.D. 714, ſeems to have ariſen from a faint tradition of the Carthaginian diſcovery of Madeira above-mentioned. The ſtill more ridiculous Welſh tale of Madoc probably aroſe from the ſame cauſe, modified by the fabulous voyage of St. Brandan, an Iriſh devotee, whoſe imaginary voyage to a beautiful iſland in the Weſt is not uncommon among the manuſcripts of the middle ages.

Theſe diſcoveries of the Norwegians were probably unknown to Colon, but he may have ſeen the voyage of the Venetian brothers Zeni, in the fourteenth century, which, though full of fabulous circumſtances, indicates the exiſtence of iſlands far to the northweſt. However this be, the diſcovery of the Azores, in 1469, was an intermediate ſtep to farther enterpriſes in that direction; and conſpired, with other motives, to conduct Colon to a path of the greateſt glory*.

It is unneceſſary to detail theſe celebrated voyages, the firſt of which was in 1492, and the fourth and laſt in 1502, four years before his death. His diſcoveries were chiefly reſtricted to the iſlands moſt improperly called the Weſt Indies; and he viſited but few parts of the continent, the coaſt now called Paria, and the land about Porto Bello. In 1513, Balboa deſcried from the mountains the great ocean, idly and falſely called the Pacific; and it was now aſcertained, that America did not form a part of India. Mexico was conquered in 1521, and Peru in 1540. The extent of South America was now generally known; but many diſcoveries remain to be made; and even the prodigious courſe of the river Maranon, or of Amazons, was not diſcloſed till the year 1800. But the more recent diſcoveries in this and the other regions, are reſerved for the cloſe of this enquiry.

In

In North America the diſcoveries were more ſlow, if we except New Spain or Mexico, which belongs to that portion of the world. But in 1497, Cabot, equipped by the Engliſh monarch, Henry VII., diſcovered Newfoundland, and a part of the American coaſt. As, however, the intention of his expedition was to diſcover a nearer paſſage to India, his diſcoveries were neglected. The gold, diamonds, and ſpices of the Eaſt were, at that time, the ſole objects; and the very idea of colonies had not yet preſented itſelf. The firſt colonies in the northern parts were attempted by the French; but Canada was not a firm and laſting ſettlement till about 1620.

In 1576 Frobiſher, attempting a north-weſt paſſage, diſcovered the ſtreights which obtained his name. But, if we except the voyage of Chancelor to Ruſſia, abovementioned, little was done by the Engliſh till 1607, when the great bay of Cheſapeak was diſcovered, and the firſt laſting ſettlement was formed at Jameſtown in modern Virginia: for this name had before been given to little ſettlements ſoon abandoned; and which had been moſt unwiſely ſelected on the ſide of the great marſh called the Diſmal Swamp, in North Carolina. The hiſtory of our American colonies is well known to every reader, and we ſhall return to objects more immediately connected with the preſent deſign. In 1585 Davis viſited the weſtern coaſt of Greenland, and explored the narrow ſea abſurdly called Davis's Streight. He ſeems to have proceeded as far as Sanderſon's Hope, lat. 72°, when he was impeded by the ice, as the celebrated Cook was, at the ſame latitude, in the paſſage between Aſia and America.

In 1610 Hudſon diſcovered the ſtreights which bear his name, and the inland ſea abſurdly called Hudſon's Bay. In general, the appellations given by the ignorant Engliſh ſeamen to their diſcoveries have been the moſt abſurd that could be conceived; while the Spaniards, with their Saints, did not at leaſt give inaccurate or erroneous impreſſions.

The objections ſtarted by the author to the exiſtence of Baffin's Bay, have been ſtated in a former work, but may here be repeated.

"In 1616, ſome public ſpirited gentlemen ſent Captain Bilot to attempt a north-weſt paſſage. William Baffin failed with him as pilot: and this voyage is one of the moſt ſingular in the whole circle of geography. Far exceeding the utmoſt ſtretch of Davis, they diſcovered Horn Sound, Cape Dudley Diggs, Hakluyt Iſland, Sir Thomas Smith's Sound, Cary's Iſlands, Alderman Jones's Sound, and Sir James Lancaſter's Sound: all of them totally unknown to any preceding or ſucceeding navigator. Baffin thus pretended that he had, in an inland and narrow ſea, (which, to encreaſe the abſurdity, is laid down in our maps with all its ſhores, a matter never before attempted from a firſt and imperfect viſit) proceeded to the latitude of more than 78°, while Captain Cook, the moſt ſkilful of modern navigators, could not exceed 72° in the open arctic ocean, and Davis himſelf was ſtopped at 72° in this very ſea, ſuppoſed to be inland, while it is probably only part of that ocean. It is further remarkable, that this voyage is very imperfectly known from Baffin's relation, publiſhed by Purchas; and all the charts and maps of this pretended bay, have been merely laid down from the obſervations contained in his journal; for if Baffin made any chart, it was not publiſhed by Purchas. It is, perhaps, equally remarkable, that no doubt ſeems yet to have been entertained concerning the exiſtence of Baffin's Bay; while it is not improbable that he is merely a bold impoſtor who wiſhed to recommend himſelf to his employers, by the pretence of having impoſed their names on grand and important features of nature; and by his numerous Sounds to have laid a ſcheme for drawing more money from his protectors, for the inveſtigation of a north-weſt paſſage. Yet it would ſeem that ſtrong doubts prevailed even at the time; for theſe ſuppoſed diſcoveries were entirely neglected.

"Suppoſing that Baffin's Bay were diſmiſſed from our maps, it is probable that Greenland is a continuation of the continent, and ſpreads to the weſt about lat. 75°; or it may be detached land, (like New Holland,) extending towards the pole. The general line of the arctic ſea in this quarter, as ſeen by Mr. Hearne, 1772, and Mr. M'Kenzie, 1789, is about lat. 70°; and it is not improbable that, at a little higher latitude, it coaleſces with what is called Baffin's Bay; in which caſe Greenland is a detached land, and the country on the north of Hudſon's Bay conſiſts of ſeveral large iſlands in the arctic ocean."

The weſtern coaſts of North America were faintly explored by Sir Francis Drake, who bequeathed his name to a haven, a conſiderable way to the north of California. The Spaniſh policy watched with anxious care over the ſhores of New Spain; and a minute detail of their diſcoveries, either here, or on the weſtern coaſts of South America, would be attended with no ſmall difficulty and diſcuſſion, and after all prove little intereſting at the preſent time. The recent diſcoveries in this direction are reſerved for a ſubſequent part of this reſearch.

The more extenſive diſcoveries of the Portugueſe in Africa, and of the Spaniards and other nations in America, having been thus unfolded; it remains to return to the progreſs of diſcovery in Aſia, after the Portugueſe had paſſed to Hindoſtan, by the Cape of Good Hope. It has already been ſeen, that very few regions of that vaſt continent had eſcaped the ſurpriſing reſearches of Marco Polo; but his work is ſo ſuccinct that he left much to be wiſhed.

The Portugueſe diſcoveries had not been neglected; and in 1540 they had reached Japan. The Moluccas or Spice Iſlands had been diſcovered in 1511, and poſſeſſed in 1512. Theſe iſlands were ſo important, and had been ſo much celebrated in all ages, that this poſſeſſion was warmly conteſted by the Spaniards. The famous line of demarcation, eſtabliſhed by a papal bull, was one hundred leagues to the Weſt of the Azores, all the countries to the Eaſt of this line being aſſigned to the Portugueſe; on the Weſt to Spain: but the queſtion was, where the limits were to meet on the other half of the globe, which ought to have been at 145° Eaſt longitude. The Spice Iſlands are about 128° E. L. from Greenwich, and Ferro being 17° 45′ W. L. there will be about 145° for the longitude of the Spice Iſlands, to which muſt be added the extent of 100 leagues to the Weſt of the Azores, equal to 5°, leaving 16° to be added; ſo that the whole being 171°, the Spice Iſlands certainly belonged to the Portugueſe. This conteſt between the two countries for iſlands on the oppoſite half of the globe, at the diſtance of about 11,000 miles, ſcarcely intereſts us ſo much, amidſt the vaſt progreſs of navigation, as the Greek conflicts for little iſles in the Egean Sea. In 1529, the diſpute was amicably terminated, a large ſum of money having been paid by the Portugueſe monarch, upon condition that the Spaniſh trade with the Moluccas ſhould be diſcontinued. The Portugueſe were to be conſidered as the lords of Aſia, or the Eaſtern hemiſphere; while the Spaniards held the Weſt. Yet the Portugueſe ſettlement in Braſil was connived at, or paſſed in ſilence, (the Spaniſh conqueſts in Mexico and Peru having ſufficiently occupied their attention,) and being indeed at that time of very little conſequence. The Spaniſh deſign upon the Spice Iſlands had, however, led to the famous voyage of Magalhaens, or Magellan, who paſſed to the grand ocean by the ſouthern extremity of America.

About the time that Japan was explored by European ſhips in 1540, the Portugueſe and Spaniſh diſcoveries, ſeem not only to have pervaded moſt of the ſouthern ſhores of Aſia, and the Aſiatic Iſlands, but to have extended to Auſtralaſia. The eaſtern coaſts of the vaſt iſland, abſurdly called New Holland, are delineated on a large chart on vellum, drawn in 1542, and in three French Atlaſes, the moſt modern 1555; that of 1547 having even part of the weſtern ſhore. M. Barbié du Bocage, an ingenious French geographer, argues that this region was diſcovered by a Portugueſe veſſel which ſailed from Ternat to obtain gold at Celebez, and being driven to the South by a tempeſt, reached an iſland 30 leagues in circumference, where the people were of a copper colour. But the inhabitants of Auſtralaſia, and the adjacent iſles, are of a black complexion. The fact is, that the Portugueſe diſcoveries around the precious Spice Iſlands were guarded with the ſtricteſt ſecrecy, as much as the Spaniſh territories in New Spain, the ſpices and cochineal being ſpecial objects of commercial avarice and ſpeculation: but it is moſt probable, that the Portugueſe, in their extenſive traffic with the Aſiatic Iſlands had, either by voluntary exertion, or conſtrained by tempeſts, explored a conſiderable portion of Auſtralaſia, about the year 1530.

Their trade with China had of courſe preceded that with Japan; and that prodigious empire was now viſited on the ſouth. The other Portugueſe diſcoveries in ſouthern Aſia being trivially known, it is unneceſſary to enter into unintereſting details. But the northern parts of that vaſt continent afford another important topic of inveſtigation.

The northern parts of Europe had been laid open in a great degree by the voyage of Ohter in the 9th century, preſerved by King Alfred in his tranſlation of Oroſius; by the Norwegian ſettlement in Iceland, and by the work of Adam of Bremen in the 11th century: and the Scandinavian writers were acquainted with the White Sea, and the northern part of Ruſſia, to be further diſcloſed by the voyage of Chancelor above mentioned. But the extenſive frozen ſhores of Aſiatic Ruſſia could not be explored except by land from the South, and were reſerved for very modern times. Siberia was firſt known by inland conqueſt. In 1242 the Monguls eſtabliſhed a principality in the weſtern part, around Tobolſk and the river Tura; ſo that in the end of that century Siberia became known to Marco Polo. Some hints may be derived from the Engliſh travelling merchants, who were induced by the commercial alliance with Ruſſia, in the 16th century, to endeavour to open, through that country, an inland trade with Perſia and Hindoſtan, one of the wideſt ſyſtems of inland traffic ever undertaken by Europeans, and rivalling the oriental caravans.

Still little was known concerning Siberia, till the reign of Peter the Great introduced Ruſſia into European policy and civilization. Till this reign, even the Caſpian Sea had been falſely repreſented by all geographers, as extending from weſt to eaſt, while its greateſt length is from north to ſouth; an error rectified by the maps taken by his command. Strahlenberg, a Swediſh officer, taken priſoner at Pultava, amuſed his leiſure in Siberia, by collecting materials for an ample account and a map of that country, which appeared in an Engliſh tranſlation in 1737. This important map firſt diſplayed the real ſeats of the Huns, the Tatars, the Monguls, nations which had repeatedly influenced the deſtinies of the Eaſt, and even of part of Europe, and which had not been ſo diſtinctly aſcertained by the famous work of De Witt, the Dutch ambaſſador in Ruſſia, publiſhed in Dutch, and called "Eaſt and Weſt Tartary." By theſe authors the prodigious extent of Siberia, the courſes of the great rivers Ob, Yeniſei, and Lena, and the mountainous chains which pervade central Aſia, began to be introduced into geography. The Uralian mountains began to be aſſumed, as the grand natural boundary between Aſia and Europe. Not long after Bering explored the ſtreight which divides Aſia from America; and our immortal Cook imparted more accuracy to the diſcoveries of the Ruſſians, who are unſkilled in the delicate obſervation of the longitude.

The mention of this great name leads us to the laſt object of this enquiry, the recent diſcoveries within the laſt half century, which have not only been important in themſelves, but have thrown a more ſevere accuracy, and a more ſteady light upon numerous regions, formerly only dimly deſcried. The numerous voyages and travels that have appeared within the laſt fifty years, have improved our knowledge to ſuch a degree, that in a collection of this nature the accounts preceding that period are rather to be regarded as curious, than uſeful. A work of this kind ſhould rather be intended as an ample ſyſtem of geography, ſupplying at the ſame time the place of the books called "the Preſent State of all Nations," than as an unintereſting catalogue of the moſt uſeleſs, obſcure, and erroneous volumes of voyages and travels, arranged in a kind of hiſtorical narrative, which, being in the third perſon, deſtroys the dramatic intereſt of the original account, and often even its veracity.

The voyages of Cook may therefore be regarded as forming an illuſtrious epoch; the obſervations being ſo candidly and carefully ſtated, as to excite the emulation of ſucceeding writers, who have conſpired to introduce into the accounts of all countries a ſuperior diſcernment, and more important topics, than had been formerly traced. Few countries can be named that have not, within the laſt fifty years, been deſcribed in a manner ſo ſuperior to the former weak narratives, that very few of them retain any other intereſt, than that of amuſement. The old catalogues of pictures and ſtatues, with trifling adventures by ſea and land, which were called books of travels, have ſunk into obſcurity before the new and important works, which illuſtrate the phenomena of nature, and diſplay the politics and ethics, the agriculture and commerce, the ſtate of the arts and ſciences. For theſe reaſons, this brief view of recent diſcoveries ſhall commence with the immortal exertions of Cook.

Among the new and important objects accompliſhed by this celebrated navigator, there are three which deſerve particular attention, as of the greateſt conſequence to geography, navigation, and commerce: 1. The voyage towards the South pole: 2. That towards the North, to explore the weſtern coaſt of America, with regard to the probability either of a North-weſt, or a North-eaſt paſſage from Europe to the opulent oriental regions: 3. The diſcovery of many important iſlands in the Great Ocean, abſurdly called the Pacific or the South Seas.

The reader has only to inſpect the common maps and globes, publiſhed before the time of Cook, to diſcover that a grand imaginary feature has diſappeared, namely, the Terra Auſtralis Incognita, a vaſt continent ſuppoſed to exiſt in the ſouthern hemiſphere. This idea partly aroſe from various fractions, and detached ſhores, of large and ſmall iſlands, having accidentally been obſerved by navigators; and probably from ſome traditions that might exiſt of the Portugueſe, and the certainty of the Dutch diſcoveries in Auſtralaſia; but was chiefly founded on what was regarded as a mathematical truth, that a continent was indiſpenſable in that quarter, in order to maintain the equilibrium of the globe. So vain is theory, ſo great is nature, ſo little is man, that this ratiocination proved as erroneous as that of the ancients, when they thought it infallible that the torrid zone could not be inhabited, on account of the extreme heat, being ignorant that mountains there are covered with perpetual ſnow, becauſe of their ſuperior altitude; and that, ſuch is the exuberance of the rivers, and periodical rains, that humidity rather than heat is the characteriſtic of thoſe portions of the earth, idly called by the ancients the Torrid Zone. Cook, boldly penetrating, in various directions, towards the ſouthern pole, diſſipated this illuſion of an imaginary continent, diſcovering nothing but ice, or land as barren as ice. Auſtralaſia, far from approaching the ſouthern pole, terminated in the latitude of Chili; and the ocean was found to conſtitute two thirds of the globe.

The next important object accompliſhed by Cook led to aſcertain that there was no paſſage paſſage on the weſtern coaſt of North America, which could lead to the Atlantic, a diſcovery which was followed up and completed by Vancouver, who found many large iſlands near the land, like thoſe on the coaſt of Norway, but no inlet interſecting the continent. Another moſt important branch of the ſame expedition was the diſcovery, that equally vain was the expectation of a north-eaſt paſſage, the ſea to the north of Aſia being even at 72° fettered in perpetual ice. The paſſage, which nature denies, might have been accompliſhed by art, and probably at a leſs expence than the Caledonian canal; the ſouthern iſthmus of North America being of little breadth: and perhaps the genius and enterpriſe of England, exiſting in her deſcendants of the United States, may, at no very diſtant period, accompliſh this ſublime object, ſo important to the commerce of Europe and Africa, with Aſia, and the weſtern coaſts of America.

The third great department of Cook's diſcoveries is, the having aſcertained the poſition and extent of many iſlands, large and ſmall, in the Great Ocean, now conſtituting the two grand maritime diviſions of the globe, called Auſtralaſia and Polyneſia. The diſcoveries of the Portugueſe, Spaniſh, Dutch, and Engliſh navigators in thoſe parts of the world, have been ſo ably detailed by the Preſident de Broſſes, in two quarto volumes dedicated to this ſubject, and which have been tranſlated into Engliſh by Mr. Callender, that it is unneceſſary to enter into a topic, which, by the minuteneſs of dates, details, and diſcuſſions, would little intereſt the general reader. Among the moſt celebrated names muſt be placed that of Dampier, a worthy precurſor of Cook in this wide field of diſcovery, as the reader will perceive, from ſome intereſting extracts in this collection; but the whole voyages are ſtill worthy of a choſen place in the library, as full of important information; and it is to be regretted that a new edition is not given, with a ſuperior arrangement, the parts being put together with no little confuſion. The moſt ſavage ſtate of ſociety yet explored is that of the natives of Auſtralaſia; and the forked animal of Shakſpere here appears in all his nakedneſs, wretchedneſs, and filth. An eminent anatomiſt once obſerved that Nature is a naſty jade; and certainly theſe children of nature little remind us of the golden age: but Rouſſeau, and other admirers of ſavages, abſtain from entering into the entomology, and the other diſguſting realities, which render life ſo different from romance. Theſe manners, however, were ſingularly and happily contraſted by thoſe of Otaheite, where Europeans were ſurpriſed to find ignorance and innocence walking hand in hand with vice and crime. This race, ſeemingly of Malay origin, enjoyed all the beauty and fertility of nature, and were vicious or virtuous without knowledge of either vice or virtue; but amidſt their enjoyments were expoſed to ferocious wars with the neighbouring iſlanders, and thus paid the uſual tax of humanity to pain and miſery. The ſtate of ſociety diſcovered in ſeveral other iſlands alſo intereſted thoſe who delight in ſtudying the hiſtory of man, an animal intended for labour, danger, and perhaps even war; for his life ſeems tedious if not occupied and agitated.

A ſingular novelty has lately appeared in the iſland where Cook unfortunately fell, the ſovereign of Owhyee having now a maritime force, to the ſurpriſe of the ſailors of Europe and America.

The voyages of Cook were not only followed by many others in this direction, ſuch as thoſe of Vancouver, Bligh, that of the miſſionaries ſent to convert the Polyneſians, (and it would be uncandid to omit La Perouſe, La Billardiere, and Peron;) but an Engliſh colony was ſent to Auſtralaſia, which will infallibly diffuſe illumination over that remote quarter of the world, ſo intereſting by the novelty of its aſpect and products.

The ſtyle, manner, and topics of the books of voyages and travels began alſo to be greatly improved. A new and important ſcience, that of mineralogy, had ariſen in Europe ſince 1782, when Bergman firſt erected an edifice of ſcience from disjointed fragments of imperfect knowledge. To this was added geology, or the ſtudy of the formation of the cruſt of the earth, which led men of general ſcience and information to travel, inſtead of ignorant jewellers, pilgrims and adventurers, or men who only travelled to ſee ſights and deſcribe trifles. Thoſe who contended that the world was formed by water, and thoſe who maintained the ſuperior effect of fire, ſtrongly maintain their ſyſtems by actual obſervation, and often impart uſeful facts, while the laughing reader did not care whether the earth was roaſted or boiled.

The ſtudy of political economy, and the modern ſcience called Statiſtics, particularly the views of agriculture and commerce, not only led to ſolid inſtruction, but to great practical improvements in many countries. Even the pruning knife of Johnſon helped to plant Scotland with trees: and the travels of Young in France, having become a claſſical book with the French farmers and country gentlemen, have contributed greatly to national improvement. A like ſpirit has pervaded diſtant regions, but not always with equal ſucceſs. The bread-tree has been introduced into the Weſt-Indies, but the negroes ſeem juſtly to prefer their former favourite food, the banian. The ſugar-cane of Otaheite or Bourbon, has ſupplanted the ancient creole; but though ſuperior in the quantity of juice, and of courſe more profitable to the planter, our ſugar and rum are of much inferior quality; and the honeſt coloniſt begins to reſume the creole ſtem.

Having thus diſcuſſed the important voyages of Cook, and ſome advantages that followed in this department of ſcience, it is now proper to return to the current of recent diſcovery, beginning with Aſia, the moſt important continent, and making a circuit by America and Africa, to Europe.

The voyage of Thunberg to Japan added a great number of important articles of information to the former accounts of that ſingular country, while that of La Perouſe threw more light upon the adjacent ſeas. The Engliſh embaſſy to China gave a more ſtable form to many floating notions concerning that empire, though drawn up in a ſtyle full of proſe and pretenſions, the leaves far exceeding the fruit. The French miſſionaries have ſomewhat illuſtrated Tonquin and Siam, while the Birman empire has been viſited by an Engliſh traveller.

The geographical labours of Rennell, the firſt Engliſh writer who claims the applauſe of a geographer, have exceeded all former deſcriptions of Hindoſtan; but much remains to be done, particularly towards the Indus. The ſources of the Ganges have been explored by an Engliſh excurſion, narrated in the Calcutta Tranſactions, and found amidſt glaciers on the ſouthern ſide of Himala: but of the intereſting country of Tibet we only know a ſmall part; and ſtill leſs of Little Bucharia, regions which remain for future enterpriſe. They are ſubject to the Chineſe empire, which our conqueſts in Hindoſtan have rendered extremely jealous and vigilant, but perhaps a Frank might penetrate, either in the diſguiſe of a Hindoo pilgrim, or of that of a gylong or travelling merchant; but the danger of detection cannot be unfelt or diſguiſed.

The recent travels in Perſia having unhappily been confined to the weſtern borders of that wide kingdom, the geography of the eaſtern parts, and of Great Bucharia, remain not a little obſcure. A route is wanted from Iſpahan to Samarcand; and from Teheran, the modern capital, to the Indus. Few travels could preſent topics more intereſting, both to ancient and modern hiſtory. Mr. Browne, who has deſervedly gained great applauſe by his Travels in Africa, has, at the ſuggeſtion of the author, attempted this enterpriſe, with what ſucceſs muſt be left for time to determine; but in courage, prudence, love of ſcience, and intimate acquaintance with the eaſtern languages and manners, he can never be exceeded; and it is hoped, will command reſpect even among the ferocious Uſbeks. May this tribute to his merit be ſeen by him on his ſafe return!

The Travels of Niebuhr in Arabia, and thoſe of Volney and Browne in Syria, leave us little to wiſh concerning theſe countries; yet the center of Arabia continues little known; the ſandy deſerts impeding the intercourſe. Aſia Minor, a claſſical country, remains obſcure, though it has been pervaded by different travellers in various directions. The celebrated quarries of Phrygian marble, compared by the ancients to roſes ſprinkled on ſnow, and which is, perhaps, the peach-bloſſom of modern Rome, continue unexplored; with many cities recorded in Greek and Roman times.

In the north of Aſia the Ruſſian travellers and navigators have left little to be wiſhed. Gmelin, Pallas, and many other names are diſtinguiſhed in this department. The utmoſt extremities have been illuſtrated by the maſterly hand of Cook; and Kamchatka has not only been deſcribed by Ruſſian, but by French and Engliſh navigators. The chain of iſlands, reaching from the eaſt of Aſia to the weſtern extremity of North America, has been carefully examined; and that extremity of the new continent affords another diſplay of the accurate labours of Cook. Vancouver may be ſaid to have completed our knowledge of the ſhores; while the journies of Hearne and Mackenzie enter into intereſting details in that direction, and diſcloſe ſeats of future colonies from the

the United States, which may open a direct and ſpeedy trade with all the opulent regions of the Eaſt. In the South-weſt, the geography of New Spain and New Mexico, has, within theſe three years, been placed in an entirely new light, by the travels of Humboldt and Pike. The extenſive courſe of the Red river has been found to lead from the Miſſiſippi, or rather Miſſouri, to the mountains of New Mexico, and proximity of Sante Fé. The ſituation and intereſting environs of the city of Mexico, and many other points indiſpenſable to the geography and hiſtory of the opulent province of New Spain, have been eſtabliſhed by Humboldt, a multifarious traveller, who pretends to all kinds of knowledge, but whoſe very miſtakes may lead, in time, to uſeful corrections and obſervations. With ſuch jealouſy had Spain watched over this moſt important province, for three entire centuries, that theſe deſcriptions may juſtly be claſſed among the greateſt diſcoveries of recent times.

In contemplating ſuch grand objects, it would be beneath the dignity of the ſubject to mention the more minute paths that have been explored. While we paſs, therefore, to South America, we ſhall immediately aſſume the great diſcoveries to the Eaſt of the Andes, where the Spaniſh miſſionaries have diſcloſed as it were a new empire, between the years 1790 and 1800, partly covered with prodigious foreſts, and partly inhabited by native tribes, affording new phenomena of man and manners. Two of thoſe tribes, ſituated about 8° ſouth latitude, in their colour and beard reſemble Flemings, ſo white is their ſkin, ſo fair their complexions; while it is well known that the other indigenes are of a copper colour, with little or no beard. This moſt ſingular circumſtance unites with the black tribes on the frozen mountains of Tibet, to convince us that climate has little influence on the various races of mankind. While the women of theſe tribes are of unrivalled beauty, and equal to the Georgians and Circaſſians, they wander naked among their foreſts, and eat human fleſh! Their harſh language is guttural, and reſembles the barking of dogs; and they never ſpeak without geſticulation, ſtriking their thighs with great force. Such are theſe tribes, ſurmounting Europeans in external appearance and perſonal advantages; and ſo much does man depend upon circumſtances. Another tribe, otherwiſe remarkable for humanity, dreſs and devour their dead relations, as the greateſt mark of affection they can beſtow.

Theſe wide regions, clothed with perpetual foreſts, are alſo abundant in the ſpices, frankincenſe, and other precious gums. The warmth and humidity produce crowds of inſects; and the reptiles are of a moſt enormous ſize; ſo that ſerpents are mentioned forty yards in length and four in circumference, thus ſurpaſſing the Boas of Africa or Hindoſtan. At a period when theoretical writers, of more zeal than knowledge, are providing againſt the dangers to ariſe from exceſſive population, a greater knowledge of geography would lead them to conſider half the earth as uninhabited. This prodigious new empire, of ſuperabundant fertility, with the fertile iſland of Papua or New Guinea, might receive a population equal to that of Europe; while they are now only loaded with uſeleſs foreſts, inhabited by a few ſcat-tered ſavages, who might live with more comfort in a little iſle of thirty miles ſquare. Theſe grand diſcoveries have been ridiculouſly called by the Miſſionaries Pampas del Sacramento, or the Plains of the Holy Sacrament; while the author, in regard to the memory of Colon, the great diſcoverer of America, has propoſed to call this vaſt country Colonna.

Theſe moſt important diſcoveries having remained buried in ſcarce Spaniſh books, were only developed in the latter editions of the author's geography; and he may be permitted to make an extract or two, as neceſſary to the preſent deſign. The manners of theſe new tribes ſhall form the firſt topic. "The Indians in general were found to be tall and robuſt, and the Conibos would vie with the Europeans in fairneſs, if they did not diſcolour themſelves, and ſuffer moreover from the ſtings of the muſquitos. They bind their children with bandages of flax, that they may grow strait; an abſurdity thus found not to be peculiar to civilized nations. The forehead is alſo flattened in infancy, by boards faſtened before and behind, as in their idea a wiſe head ſhould reſemble a full moon. They are, however, in conſequence of this practice, almoſt utterly without memory. The girls go intirely naked; while the married women wear a ſlight cincture; but among many other tribes complete nakedness is univerſal. They are painted and tattooed; do not marry within certain degrees; and the cazics alone uſe polygamy; but the men and women are free to quit each other. They ſeem to believe in one God, of a human form, who retired to heaven after making the earth; but do not venture to offer their humble adorations, except during earthquakes, which they believe to proceed from the footſteps of their God, who viſits the earth, in order to judge by their voices how many men exiſt. Hence, on the ſmalleſt earthquakes they run from their hovels, caper and ſtamp on the ground, crying out "here we are! here we are!" They alſo believe in an evil ſpirit, of whom the moſt ſagacious, for the ſake of emolument, have dared to declare themſelves the prieſts, and regulate in his name amours, intrigues, health and ſickneſs, and the little campaigns of war. They have alſo many charms and amulets, yet ſometimes their ſkill in medical herbs is far from being contemptible. They alſo believe in another life, but imagine that thunders are the battles of that diſtant world, and that the milky way is a beautiful foreſt for their diverſion. Some believe in tranſmigration, and ſuppoſe that the ſouls of their chiefs and nobles animate tigers and monkies. The dead are diſinterred after a certain period, and the bones waſhed and preſerved; but ſome tribes eat the fleſh, that nothing may be loſt. Beſides the chace and fiſhing, they cultivate a few herds, particularly the yuca, with which they make the muzato, their only drink and conſolation. The water is generally bad, owing to the heat and numerous marſhes which taint the rivers. In order to cultivate the yuca, they cut down the trees with great patience, uſing axes of ſtone; and Girval brought from Manoa one made of the ſtone called by the Spaniards ala de moſca, or fly's wing, mentioned tioned in the deſcription of Peru; but they have alſo axes of copper, the firſt metal uſed by ſavages, being often found native, and eaſily beaten into form, while iron is obdurate, and requires the ſkill of a more advanced ſociety. The ground is ſlightly moved with a wooden ſpade, and the yuca being interred, the labour is finiſhed. They alſo gather cotton, which ſerves for their little cinctures. Such are their agriculture and manufactures. Their darts and arrows are often tinctured with active poiſon, drawn from noxious plants. So great is their confidence in its power, that they will awake the fury, and await the attack of the ſtrongeſt and fierceſt jaguar. They laugh when he prepares to ſpring: the arrow flies and he is dead. But they never employ poiſoned weapons in their conflicts, not ſo much from liberality of ſentiment, as from the fear of a retort. Large fiſh are killed with arrows aimed at their heads; the ſmall are taken in ſnares, or with hooks of bone. From the age of five years, boys and girls manage the canoes: one ſtands on the prow, to guard againſt the ſhoals formed by the large trees, which oppreſs the rivers, while the other, at the poop, uſes an oar as an helm to guide the tiny navigation. But the ruling paſſion is war, the buſineſs of the entire tribe preſided by the cazic, or intended general. The tobacco tubes are lighted, the jars of muzato paſs around: and as ſoon as drunkenneſs begins, this important ſubject is deliberated; the firſt and ſolemn queſtion before the rude parliament being "With what nation ſhall we go to war?" while the next is, "What ſhall be the cauſe of quarrel?" The cauſes generally are ſome petty robbery or offence; or becauſe the tribe has been injured by another with whom they dare not go to war, the weakeſt being generally choſen, as being the moſt convenient enemy. The expedition being reſolved upon, the moans, or prieſts of the evil ſpirit, take charge of their chiefs, and treat them with ſuch abſtinence and artificial horrors, that at the end of ſome days they come forth rather dead than alive. With a more clear and rational judgment, theſe ſavages impute all ſucceſs in war to the evil ſpirit; and carefully conceal from their deity their proceedings on ſuch an occaſion. Hence the moans are held reſponſible for the reſult of the expedition; and if it be adverſe, they receive a thouſand maledictions, and are beaten almoſt to death, becauſe their prayers to the evil ſpirit had not been acceptable. The petty warfares being inceſſant, the villages, or rather large houſes before mentioned, are prepared for defence. In the form of a creſcent, with the convex part towards the wood, there is one door towards ſome hill, and another to a plain. When the enemy attack at one door, a party oppoſes; while the other turns the wings of the houſe, and attack the foe on the flanks."

But the moſt extraordinary and important feature in theſe new diſcoveries is the extenſive courſe of the Maranon or river of Amazons, which opens ſuch an inlet to the center of South America, as to offer the advantages of a Mediterranean ſea. As this diſcovery is of the utmoſt importance to a commercial nation, it is hoped that the deſire to make it more known will excuſe the repetition.

" General View of the Maranon, and its confluent Streams, from the Diſcoveries 1790—1800.

" Among the grand rivers which water the globe, and diffuſe fertility and commerce along their ſhores, the Maranon will ever maintain the preference. Condamine had already computed its navigation at a thouſand maritime leagues, or three thouſand miles; to which, from the recent diſcoveries, may be added, at leaſt four or five hundred leagues, ſo that if the countries were poſſeſſed by induſtrious and populous nations, a ſhip of four or five hundred tons might aſcend this wonderful river to the extent of four thouſand five hundred miles of navigation! A frigate of ſome force might awaken, with its artillery, the echoes of the ſtupendous Andes!

" Computed in a general geographical view, as the courſe of the Maranon, for more than one-third of its progreſs is from S. to N. it conſiderably exceeds the whole breadth of South America; but taken on the ſame ſcale with the other rivers, that is, in a line nearly direct, the length on a map will be found to be about two thouſand five hundred g. miles. The Kian of China, eſtimated in the ſame manner, has been found to reach two thouſand miles; and the Ob of Siberia nineteen hundred. The Miſſouri of North America may probably attain two thouſand miles. The pre-eminence of the Maranon, far from being loſt, is greatly increaſed by the recent diſcoveries. This prodigious river, this torrent ſea, is not only ſuperior in the length, but in the breadth and depth of its majeſtic courſe; and receives, on all ſides, as tributaries, rivers of ſuch power that any one would enrich the deſarts of Africa, and might ſpread fertility, trade, and civilization throughout a wide empire. It has been ſeen that where the Beni joins the Maranon, it is half a league in breadth. The Tunguragua from the Weſt; the Llavari or Madera from the S.; the Negro from the N., are all rivers of this ſurpriſing deſcription. In ſhort, through more than one-half of the great continent of South America, almoſt every advantage of a maritime ſhore might be diffuſed by the Maranon and its confluent ſtreams.

" The recent diſcoveries having been buried in the Spaniſh language, and in voluminous works of very difficult acquiſition, it is no wonder that they have eſcaped even an enlightened age. But as they lead to new ideas concerning the wonderful diverſity and majeſty of the works of nature, they deſerve great attention; while, at the ſame time, they throw a new and important light on the ſcience of geography. The diſcovery of the ſources of the Miſſouri, and of the Nile, the complete ſource of the Niger, have been eſteemed objects of ſupreme importance; and when the courſe of the mighty river Burrampooter, and its grand confluence with the Ganges, were diſcloſed by an excellent modern geographer, no ſmall admiration was excited; but even theſe objects greatly diminiſh, when compared with the ſublimity of the Maranon.

" The diſcuſſion concerning the ſources of the Maranon, and the removal of the ridiculous diſtortions of the Jeſuits, were indiſpenſable in the general view of the rivers of South America, the firſt object of ſcience being to diſpel error; and the preceding details concerning the country and tribes on the Maranon, neceſſarily accompanied the relation of the recent diſcoveries, as the reader might thereby perceive that they are not theoretic nor imaginary, but founded on actual enterprize. But an abſtract of the whole may be ſatisfactory to the reader, and uſeful to the geographer, eſpecially as the original writers have ſcarcely obſerved any arrangement.

" 1. The MARANON. Near its ſource this river is called the Apurimac, which riſes to the ſouth of the mineral mountains of Cailloma, perhaps in the lake of Vilque, as laid down by La Cruz, ſouth latitude 16° 10'; but probably ſtill more to the ſouth; perhaps even 17°, for, after being joined by the Monigote in Cailloma, it is ſo deep when it enters the province of Canes and Canches that a bridge is already neceſſary. On the weſt of Cuzco it is a powerful river.

" The chief rivers which join the Maranon are as follow:

" 2. The river of Pampas, or Charcas, from the weſt, at 13° 10'.

" 3. The Vilcamayo, a great river, nearly equal to the Apurimac, or Maranon, at 12° 15'. The Vilcamayo, like the others, has ſeveral names according to the provinces it paſſes, as the river of Quillabamba, Urubamba, &c.; a circumſtance which has often proved a great impediment to geographical knowledge.

" 4. The Mantaro, or river of Jauja, ſo called from the province it pervades, joins the Maranon at 12° 6', and ſeems to propel the chief river towards the north-eaſt, the courſe having formerly been towards the north-weſt. The Mantaro has been ridiculouſly called the ancient Maranon, by La Cruz.

" 5. The great river Paucartambo, far from joining the Vilcamayo, as laid down by La Cruz, joins the Maranon at 10° 45', being, in fact, the river ſtyled by La Cruz, Ynambari, a name which Bueno had learned from ſome ſavage tribe on its banks. The Perene has already joined the Maranon, on the oppoſite ſide, or weſt, at 11° 18'. The Perene riſes about two leagues from Tarma, runs through that town, and receives many ſtreams from the heights of Bombom and Paſco. From the confluence of the Perene to that with the beautiful river Pachitea, at 8° 26', that is a ſpace of 2° 52', or one hundred and ſeventy-two g. miles, though by numerous windings, probably increaſed to five hundred, the Maranon receives no leſs than forty copious rivers; but above all, two of prodigious power, the Paucartambo above mentioned, and the Beni.

" 6. Three leagues beneath the junction of the Paucartambo, the Maranon is joined by a river, about two Britiſh miles, or half a Spaniſh league in breadth, of ſuch power and force, that the courſe of the Maranon is changed for a ſpace, and bent towards the chain of the Andes. But ſuch is the amazing grandeur of theſe ſtreams, that this river of two miles in breadth is only a branch of the grand river BENI, which, at 13°, has ſent off another large branch into the lake of Rogagado, whence iſſuing in three powerful ſtreams, the Yutay, the Teſi, and the Coari, the Beni pays a ſecond prodigious tribute to the Maranon! Nature defies all the theories of man; and it would be difficult to pronounce whether the BENI or the APURIMAC be the principal ſtream, a queſtion at preſent diſcuſſed by Spaniſh geographers, while the Tunguragua, or jeſuitic Maranon, is entirely ſet aſide. The reader will reflect, that from the watery eruptions of the volcanos, and other circumſtances, it may be judged that there are vaſt ſubterraneous lakes and rivers under the ſtupendous table-land of the Andes, whence the ſubterraneous noiſes and winds, and other phenomena already deſcribed. The ſize and power of the rivers, even near their ſources, do not therefore, in this view, excite much ſurpriſe. The ſource of the BENI near Sicaſica is about 2° 30′ further to the S. than that of the APURIMAC, but as its courſe is far more direct, the actual length of the navigation bears no compariſon with that of the MARANON, which at this junction acquires the name of the GRAND PARA. The navigation of the Beni might conduct the adventurer to the mines of Potoſi, and that of the Apurimac to Cuzco and Lima!

"7. At 8° 26′ the Pachitea joins the Maranon. The Pachitea is eſteemed the moſt beautiful of all theſe tributary ſtreams. It riſes in 10° 46′, firſt running E. then N., and in the early part of its progreſs is called the Pozuzu, eſpecially at its confluence with the Mayro, where it forms a noted haven, whence there is an open navigation to the Maranon. The next remarkable ſtream that joins the Pachitea is the Piachiz. The courſe of the Maranon here varies from due N. to N.E.; and the map of La Cruz muſt be erroneous in the great weſterly inflection of its courſe, thereby approaching the Gualaga too nearly by one half.

"8. The Aguaytia alſo joins the Maranon from the W. at 7° 35′; the Manoa or Cuxniabatay at 7°; the Saraicu at 6° 45′; the Tapichi, or Canopocati, oppoſite to San Régis, at 5°. This laſt river ſeems alſo to communicate with the Tunguragua.

"9. The Tunguragua, Lauricocha, or jeſuitic Maranon, falls into the Maranon at 4° 45′, where the latter is divided into three branches, the chief of which is not leſs than fifty-five fathoms in depth. The courſe of the Maranon now turns to the eaſt; and has been ſufficiently explored.

"It has been ſeen that the navigation of the Maranon had, by the laſt account of the miſſionaries, been only explored as far as the confluence of the Pachitea; but it may well be ſuppoſed that it has now been explored to its utmoſt ſtretch, and it is to be hoped that the new map of South America, about to be publiſhed at Madrid by Bauza, will diffuſe a ſteady light over theſe new and important diſcoveries."

Having ſtated this great diſcovery, which has hitherto been little known, our progreſs now leads us to Africa, of all the continents the leaſt explored. Some progreſs has been made from the Cape of Good Hope towards the north-eaſt; but in ſpite of our amity with Portugal we have not inveſtigated her ſettlements in Sofala and the circumjacent regions. The alliance with the Portugueſe might alſo have been of ſervice in penetrating by the ſhorteſt route to the centre of Africa, from their iſlands in the Gulf of Guinea. In this, and other diſcoveries to be made among Mahometans, where Europeans are expoſed to the greateſt danger, it would ſeem preferable to employ ſome of our Mahometant ſubjects in Hindoſtan, ſo as to form a little unſuſpected caravan, who might travel without riſk. Numbers might be found ſufficiently intelligent for an expedition of this kind; and the climate would moreover agree better with the conſtitutions of people under a ſimilar parallel. Within this recent period, however, many important diſcoveries have been made. Mr. Browne, a man of fortune, travelling for the pure love of ſcience, has explored the ruins of the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, and has penetrated as far as Darfur, ſpending three years in a country formerly unviſited by any European. His account of this and the adjacent regions forms a grand acceſſion to African geography.

The African Society, who have ſpared no exertion to obtain more preciſe ideas concerning this continent, except the expedient above ſuggeſted, of employing Mahometan travellers, has ſent ſeveral inveſtigators, with little ſucceſs, except in the caſe of Mr. Park, who determined the courſe of the Niger to be from Weſt to Eaſt, agreeably to the ideas of Ptolemy. As to Tombuctoo, ſo much an object of reſearch, it is probably only a collection of mud hovels, magnified by the uſual oriental exaggeration. The ſandy deſarts of Africa would be far better explored by a little caravan of Mahometans, as above mentioned, than by Chriſtian adventurers, always expoſed to ſuſpicion and danger.

Returning from Africa to Europe, the diſcoveries on our part of the continent cannot be expected to be of much importance. But great progreſs has been made in rectifying the geography of many countries by trigonometrical maps, and aſtronomical obſervations. In the latter however, there unaccountably remain great deficiences in Great Britain and Ireland. The ſuppoſed certainty of our knowledge has led to the neglect of producing accurate evidences; and, while we continue ignorant of our ignorance, it is no wonder that little progreſs is made in this eſſential department.

Having thus given a brief, but it is hoped a complete review of the progreſs of diſcovery by ſea and land, both in ancient and modern times, and cloſed it with the recent gigantic ſteps ſince the epoch of Cook's voyages, this compilation is now diſmiſſed, in the hope that it will be found a faithful and accurate collection of ſome of the curious, and all the beſt voyages and travels that have yet appeared. In ſo large a plan there may be ſome omiſſions which can eaſily be ſupplied by a ſupplemental volume or two; but upon the whole, it will be found to unite, with the advantages of a library of voyages, thoſe of what have been called "Modern States of all Countries."

Cæſareæ Majeſtatis Conſiliarii Aulico-bellici, ab auguſto imperatore Leopoldo I. ad ſereniſſimum ac potentiſſimum Tzarum et magnum Moſcoviæ ducem Petrum Alexiowicium, anno 1698, ablegati extraordinarii, deſcriptum a Joanne Georgio Korbio. Acceſſit reditus Suæ Tzareæ Majeſtatis a provinciis Europæis ad proprios limites, periculoſæ rebellionis Streliziorum et latæ in eoſdem ſententiæ, cum ſubſecutâ ſanguineâ executione; nec non præcipuarum Moſcoviæ rerum compendioſa et accurata deſcriptio; cum figuris æneis. Vienna, 1700, fol.

This work, which is peculiarly valuable for the anecdotes of the Ruſſian court it contains, was ſuppreſſed at the deſire of Peter I., which has rendered it very ſcarce. Among other relations of the rebellion of the Strelitzes, we learn that the Czar beheaded eleven of the rebels in ten days with his own hand.

For ſolid information, both as to the manners of the different people of Ruſſia, and natural hiſtory, there are few works equal to that of Profeſſor Pallas. A German abridgment appeared at Leipſic 1776–78, 3 vol. 8vo. The entire work was tranſlated into French by Gautheir de la Peyronie. Paris, 1788, 5 vol. 4to.; and publiſhed again with notes, by Langlés and Lamarck, Ib. 1794, 8 vol. 8vo. A great ſhare of the merit of the travels of Georgi, Gmelin, and Lepechin is alſo to be attributed to Pallas, under whoſe directions they travelled, and who reviſed and corrected their manuſcripts.

Hiſtoriſch-ſtatiſtiſches Gemœhlde von Rufsland. (Hiſtoric and ſtatiſtic View of Ruſſia.) By H. Storch. Leipſic, 1796, 1799, 8vo.

This is one of the beſt works of the kind, and exceeds the ſimilar one of Tooke. The general arrangement, the foundneſs of the obſervations, and the great quantity of additional information, render the production very intereſting. It is divided into four parts: the origin and diſtribution of the different nations which inhabit the empire; the phyſical, the civil, and the moral ſtate of Ruſſia.

By Nicholas Erneſt Kleeman. Vienna, 1771. Leipſic, 1773. Prague, 1780. 8vo.—A French tranſlation. Neufchatel, 1780, 8vo.

This work contains an intereſting account of the court of the Khan of Crimea, and of the ſtate of the country, and the manners of the Tartarian inhabitants, many of whom have emigrated ſince the Ruſſian conqueſt. One of the beſt accounts of the country and its inhabitants is that of Thaumann, inſerted in the ſeventh edition of Büſching's Geography. Hamburgh, 1777, 8vo. Vol. II.

Eton afferts Baron Tott's Account of Turkey, and of its inhabitants, to be the beſt and moſt exact extant. There are, however, ſeveral exaggerations and inaccuracies in the work, as may be eaſily conceived from the character of the author. The deſcription of the Crimea, and its inhabitants, is, perhaps, the moſt intereſting part.

J. Ferber.*) Frankfort and Leipſic (Dreſden), 1774, 8vo.

The chief object of theſe letters is metallurgy, and the ſtate of mines in Hungary and the other countries mentioned in the title. The moſt curious part, in a geographical point of view, is the deſcription of the Temeſwar Bannat, a diſtrict taken from the Turks by Prince Eugene and inhabited by Germans, Wallachians, and Reitzes. The latter are Sclavonians; the Wallachians denominate themſelves Romans, from which and from the terminations of their words the author conjectures them to have been a Roman colony.

Etat préſent d'Eſpagne, par l'Abbé de Veyrac. Amſterdam, 1717, 4 vol. 12mo.

The author's principal object is a defence of the Spaniards againſt Madame d'Aulnoi, and an endeavour to prove that her work is an intermixture of truth and fable.

Voyage d'Eſpagne hiſtorique et politique, fait en l'an 1655, (par Argens de Sommerdyk,) publié par M. de Sarcy. Paris, 1720, 12mo.

The author of theſe travels complains in a manuſcript preſerved in the library of the Arſenal at Paris, that the work had been publiſhed againſt his intention: perhaps the reaſon is, the long account of Spaniſh courtezans. However, the chapter on the grandees is curious, as well as the deſcription of old Spaniſh manners, ſo different from that in our own days. The accounts of the theatre and other public diverſions are alſo valuable, and have been made uſe of by Spaniſh authors of our own days.

Introduccion á la Hiſtoria natural y Geographia fiſica del Reyno de Eſpaña. (Introduction to the natural Hiſtory and phyſical Geography of Spain.) By Don G. Bowles, Madrid, 1776, 8vo.

This very excellent publication received additional value in the ſecond edition, by notes from the pen of the learned Chevalier d'Azara.

D. Antonio Ponz, Viage de Eſpaña, en que ſe da noticia de las coſas mas appreciables y dignas de ſaberſe, que hay en ella. (Travels in Spain, containing an account of the moſt remarkable things, and deſerving inveſtigation in that country.) Madrid, 1776, and the following years, 18 vol. 8vo.

This production is tedious to a foreigner, but very valuable as a minute account of the ſeveral provinces of Spain, the towns, roads, and above all, the objects belonging to the arts. According to Swinburne, it had already in his time produced good effects by having pointed out uſeful public works, and by reforming the bad taſte in architecture prevalent in Spain.

This, though in many reſpects a very judicious and impartial book of travels, has been almoſt entirely ſuperſeded by that of Bourgoing.

Obſervations de M. l'Abbé Cavanilles ſur l'article Eſpagne de la Nouvelle Encyclopédie. Paris, 1784, 8vo.

An anſwer to a very inconſiderate attack on Spain by Maſſon ; containing very judicious remarks on the phyſical, moral, political, and literary ſtate of Spain.

Neueſte Reiſe durch Spanien, vorzüglich in Anſehung der Künſte, des Handels, der Œconomie, und Manufacturen. (New Travels in Spain, chiefly relative to the Arts, Commerce, Economy, and Manufactures.) By J. J. Volkmann. Leipſic, 1785, 2 vol. 8vo.

Modern State of Spain, by J. Fr. Bourgoing; to which are added, Eſſays on Spain, by M. Peyron, and the Book of Poſt-Roads. London, 1808, 4 vol. 8vo., and an atlas 4to.

This, which is undoubtedly the moſt ſatisfactory of all travels in Spain, firſt appeared in 1788, and in Engliſh the following year. Other editions were publiſhed in 1797 and 1803, at Paris.

Obſervations de Phyſique et de Medicine faites en differens lieux in l'Eſpagne: on y a joint des conſiderations ſur la lèpre, la petite-verole, et la maladie venerienne, par M. Thierry. Paris, 1791, 2 vol. 8vo.

Theſe obſervations are not confined to the objects ſtated in the title, but extend to the geology and temperature of Spain, and the diet of the inhabitants. They are the reſult of a journey and long reſidence in Spain. An account of the quickſilver mines at Almadaver, by Lopez de Arebalo, is added.

Relation d'un Voyage à Madrid, fait en 1789, par Mlle. de Pons.

Only twelve copies of this journey, written by a young lady of ſixteen, and containing ſeveral curious obſervations, were thrown off; but it was inſerted in the Petit Magaſin des Dames, vol. iv.

Reiſe von Wien nach Madrid. (Journey from Vienna to Madrid, in 1790.) Berlin, 1792, 8vo.

A Journey through Spain, in the years 1786 and 1787, by J. Townſhend. London, 1793, 3 vol. 8vo.

Bourgoing reproaches this traveller with judging occaſionally with too much precipitation, and making large demands on the credulity of his readers.

Deſcrizione odeporica della Spagna, in cui ſpezialmente ſi dà notizia delle cose ſpettanti alle belle arti, degne dell'attenzione del curioſo viaggiatore, di Don Antonio Conca (Deſcription of Spain, in which a particular account is given of all the works of art worthy the attention of the curious traveller). Parma, 1793, 1795, 1797, 4 vol. 8vo.

This work, which is one of the moſt beautiful ſpecimens of the Bodino preſs, is chiefly directed, as the title-page infers, to every thing belonging to the fine arts, but the author occaſionally introduces ſeveral judicious obſervations on the ſtate of the country.

Obſervaciones ſobre la Hiſtoria natural, Geografia, Agricultura, Poblacion, y Frutos del Reyno de Valencia. (Obſervations on the Natural Hiſtory, Geography, Agriculture, Population, and Productions of the Kingdom of Valencia.) By Don Antonio Joſef de Cavanilles. Madrid, 1795, 1797, 11 vol. fol.

Lettres écrites de Barcelone; ouvrage dans lequel on donne des détails ſur l'état dans lequel ſe trouvent les frontiers d'Eſpagne en Mars 1792, &c. et ſur les émigrés, &c. auxquelles on a joint quelques reflexions philoſophiques ſur les moeurs, uſages, et opinions des Eſpagnols, par M. Ch (Chantreau), Citozen Français. Paris, nouvelle edition, 1796, 8vo.

Journal, Correſpondance, et Voyages en Italie et Eſpagne, dans les années 1758 et 1768, par M. Clément, alors tréſorier de l'egliſe d'Auxerre, et depuis évêque de Verſailles. Paris, an x.–1802, 2 vol. 8vo.

Voyage en Eſpagne, par le Marquis de Langles. Sixieme edition, avec cartes et planches. Paris, 1805, 8vo.

Theſe

Theſe travels firſt appeared in 1785 with the title, Voyage de Figaro en Eſpagne, and were burnt at Paris in 1786, which of courſe increaſed the popularity of the work. The ſeverity of this treatment was occaſioned by the boldneſs of ſome remarks, on religion particularly. An Engliſh verſion appeared with this title: — "The Marquis of Langles' Sentimental Journey through Spain." London, 2 vol. 8vo.

Le Priſonnier en Eſpagne, ou coup d'œil philoſophique et ſentimental ſur lés provinces de Catalogne et Grenade, par M. Maſſias. Paris, an. vi.–1798, 8vo.

Reiſe nach Spanien. (Travels in Spain.) By C. A. Fiſcher. Leipſic, 1798, 8vo.

The work of Fiſcher contains a very amuſing account of the manners of the inhabitants, the national character, and the public diverſions. It was ſoon tranſlated into Engliſh, as well as French.

Gemœhlde von Valentia. (Picture of Valencia.) By C. A. Fiſcher. Leipſic, 1803, 8vo.

Alſo tranſlated into Engliſh and French, and poſſeſſing the ſame merit as the previous work.

Nouveau Voyage en Eſpagne. Paris, 1805, 8vo.

The principal object of this book is an attack on the travels of the Marquis de Langles, and Bourgoing.

George Sandys' Travels, containing an hiſtory of the origin and preſent ſtate of the Turkiſh empire, their laws, government, policy, military force, courts of juſtice, and commerce. London, 1615; Ib. 1621; Ib. 1673, fol.

There are three other editions of theſe travels in Engliſh. In Flemiſh they appeared in 1669, and in German in the ſame year; but it is ſingular that they were never tranſlated into French.

A general Hiſtory of the Ottoman Empire, illuſtrated with uſeful notes and obſervations, after the manner of Meſſrs. Sandys and Addiſon; with copper-plates. London, 4to.

Rather a general view of the empire, than a hiſtory.

Voyage au Levant (dans la Turquie Europienne), fait par le commandement du Roi, en l'an 1621, par D. C. Avec planches. Paris, 1624; ib. 1629; ib. 1632; ib. 1664, 4to.

One of the firſt good accounts of the Turkiſh empire, which, notwithſtanding the number of editions, is become very ſcarce.

Relation des Voyages de M. de Breves tant en Grèce, Terre-Sainte, Egypte, qu'aux Royaumes de Tunis et d'Alger; enſemble un traité fait en 1604 entre le Roi Henri le Grand, et l'Empereur des Turcs, et trois Diſcours du dit Sieur de Breves; le tout recueilli par S. D. C. (Du Caſtel.) Paris, 1628, 4to.

This is a very inſtructive work, by an author who was two and twenty years ambaſſador in Turkey. The account of Tunis and Algiers is peculiarly valuable, as thoſe ſtates have been ſo little viſited.

Avec figures; troisieme edition. Amsterdam, 1729, 5 vol. 12mo. — Two previous editions in 3 vol. 4to., are very scarce.

Travels of Thevenot into Turkey, Persia, and India; with his portrait. London, 1687, fol.

This traveller, who is said to have first introduced coffee in France, began his journey 1655. The style is bad, but the description of the Turkish government, military force, manners, and customs, the first accurate one published. His accounts of other countries are very unsatisfactory. Porter, in his observations on the Turks, has mistakingly impeached the credit of these travels, in consequence of having confounded the traveller with his relative Melchisedech Thevenot, who published a collection of travels, but never any of his own.

Avec planches. Paris, 1787, 2 vol. fol.; Ib. 1788, 5 vol. 8vo.

The author was born at Conſtantinople; and, as far as this work has been yet publiſhed, it exhibits one of the moſt authentic accounts of Turkey. The deſcriptions are of ſingular minuteneſs and authenticity, and the Mahometan manners has never been illuſtrated with more care and preciſion. The religious inſtitutions, the pictures of domeſtic life, the ſtate of the arts and ſciences, and many other topics, are treated in great detail, and receive much new light. In the practice of the moral virtues, and an eſtrangement from groſs vices and crimes, our author eſteems the Turks to be ſuperior to moſt European nations.——This work well deſerves an Engliſh tranſlation, if not from the folio edition, at leaſt from the reduced octavo copy.

Several modern accounts of Lapland occur in the Memoirs of the Academy of Science at Stockholm; in thoſe of the Society of Sciences of Drontheim; of the Natural Hiſtory Society at Copenhagen, and in other Swediſh and Daniſh periodical publications. A manuſcript journey through the mountains of Lapland, in 1749, by Lars Martin, is in the Library of Sir Joſeph Banks; and another, relative to Finnmark or Daniſh Lapland, by Collet, in 1757, in the Royal Library at Copenhagen. From the latter, Thaarup has given extracts in his ſtatiſtical work on Denmark.

Deſcription hiſtorique et critique de l'Italie, ou nouveaux mémoires ſur l'état actuel de ſon gouvernement, des ſciences, des arts, du commerce, de la population, et de l'hiſtoire naturelle, par M. l'Abbé Richard. Paris, 2d edit. 1768, 6 vol. 12mo.—In Italian, Florence, 1784, 6 vol. 8vo.—In Engliſh, London, 1781, 8vo.

Theſe travels were performed about the year 1764, and the firſt edition appeared in 1766, but they were much enlarged in that of 1768. Notwithſtanding ſeveral omiſſions, and ſome ill-judged deſcriptions of works of art, they met with great ſucceſs.

Voyage en Italie; contenant l'hiſtoire et les anecdotes les plus ſingulières de l'Italie, et ſa deſcription; les uſages, le gouvernement, le commerce, la littérature, les arts, l'hiſtoire naturelle, et les antiquités; avec des jugemens ſur les ouvrages de peinture, ſculpture, et architecture: par M. de Lalande. Paris, 1768, 6 vol. 12mo.; Ib. enlarged, 1769, 8 vol. 8vo. and atlas 4to.—Reviſed, corrected, and augmented by an anonymous writer, Geneva, 1790, 7 vol. 8vo.

This is generally conſidered as the moſt compleat work on the ſubject, and as fully adequate to the promiſes in the title-page. Baretti beſtows a high eulogy upon it. The hiſtorical account of St. Peter's is peculiarly intereſting. By ſome, however, the preceding work of Richard is preferred.

Account of the Manners and Cuſtoms of Italy, with obſervations on the miſtakes of ſome travellers, with regard to that country, by Joſeph Baretti. London, 1770, 2 vol. 8vo.

A defence of Italy againſt the former traveller. Baretti is however occaſionally betrayed into the oppoſite extreme, by exaggerating the good qualities of his countrymen.

This work was ſeverely cenſured in the Bibliothèque Italienne, as a mere compilation from antiquated and often doubtful authority. The author has too frequently introduced etymological conjectures. His production, however, furniſhes much information on the hiſtory, agriculture, induſtry, and religion of the country.

A Journey from India to England in the year 1797, by a route commonly called over-land, through countries not much frequented and many of them hitherto unknown to Europeans, particularly thoſe between the Euphrates and the Tigris, Curdiſtan, Diarbekir, Armenia, and Natolia, in Aſia; and Romelia, Bulgaria, and Tranſylvania in Europe; by John Jackſon. London, 1799, 8vo.

Travels in Europe, Aſia-Minor, and Arabia, by J. Griffiths. London, 1805, 4to.

TRAVELS IN EUROPE, ASIA, AND AFRICA.

D. BENJAMINI TUDELENSIS Itinerarium ex verſione Montani. Antwerp, 1575, 8vo.

Itinerarium D. Benjaminis, cum verſione et notis Conſtantini Lempereur ab Oppyck S. T. D. et S. L. P. in academiâ Lugd. Batavorum. Leyden, Elzevir, 1633, 32do.; 1666, 1683, 12mo.

Both theſe tranſlations, of which the ſecond is ſuperior, alſo exhibit the original Hebrew text.

Travels of Benjamin, ſon of Jonas of Tudela, through Europe, Aſia, and Africa, from the ancient kingdom of Navarre to the ancient frontiers of China; faithfully tranſlated from the original Hebrew, and illuſtrated with a diſſertation, and notes critical, hiſtorical, and geographical, in which the true character of the author and his intention are impartially conſidered, by B. Gerrans. London, 1783, 12mo.

The traveller departed from Saragoſſa in 1173. He very ſhortly gives an account of ſeveral cities in Europe, Greece, Aſia-Minor, Upper-Aſia, Egypt, and other countries in Africa. Some obſervations on the manners and commerce of the nations viſited by him occur, but the political ſituation of the Jews, his countrymen, is his chief object. It has been ſuppoſed that he only collected reports from the latter, and his work is full of abſurdity and falſehood. The beſt French verſion, by J.P. Barathier, appeared at Amſterdam in 1784, in 2 vol. 12mo.; the more ancient one was reprinted in the following collection of ancient travels —

Voyages faits principalement dans les XII., XIII., XIV., et XV. ſiècles, par Benjamin de Tudelle, Jean Duplin Carpin, N. Ancellin, Guillaume de Rubruquis, Marc-Paul, Vénetien; Haiton, Jean de Mandeville, et Ambroſe Contarini; publiés par Pierre Bergeron. Avec des cartes géographiques. Hague, 1735, 2 vol. 4to.

Of theſe, Giovanni Plano Carpini travelled in 1246, by the north of the Caſpian, to the court of the Emperor of the Mongols, to the north of China. The ſame courſe was taken the year following by Ancellin, and both were ſent by the Pope to convert that monarch. William of Ruyſbræk, whoſe name has been corrupted by the French and Italians to Rubruquis, was ſent for the ſame purpoſe by Louis IX. in 1253, who travelled by Conſtantinople and the Crimea to the Volga and Yaik, and from thence by the north of Turkeſtan, and the lake of Balkaſh. He alſo produces accounts of Tangut, Thibet, and China. Haiton was an Armenian, who travelled in Tartary. Marco Polo and Mandeville will occur in the ſequel.

Travels

Travels of Moſes Petachia, Rabbi. (In Hebrew.) Prague, 1535, 4to.

The Hebrew text, with a Latin tranſlation, occurs in the collection of Wagenſeil; and is entitled, Exercitatio quarta repræſentans Petachiæ Itinerarium. He travelled in the twelfth century.

Les Obſervations de pluſieurs Singularités et Choſes mémorables trouvés en Grèce, en Aſie, Inde, Arabie, Egypte, et autres pays étrangers, redigées en trois livres, par Pierre Belon du Mans. Avec figures. Paris, 1550, 1555, 1585. Antwerp, 1555, 1558, 1585, 4to.

Belon was an accurate obſerver, and his remarks on the manners, the government, and particularly the natural hiſtory of the countries he viſited, have been found generally exact by ſubſequent travellers.

Les Voyages et Conquêtes des Rois de Portugal ès Indes d'Orient, en Ethiopie, en Mauritanie, Afrique, et Europe; avec une deſcription du pays, recueillie des Mémoires de Joachim de Centellas. Paris, 1578, 8vo.

Les Voyages du Seigneur de Villamont, chevalier de l'ordre de St. Jean de Jeruſalem (en Europe, Aſie, et Afrique); diviſés en trois livres. Arras, 1598. Paris, 1600, 1605, 8vo.

William Lithgow, The whole Diſcourſe of the rare Adventures and painful Peregrinations of nineteen years' Travels from Scotland to the moſt famous Kingdoms of Europe, Aſia, and Africa. London, 1611; Ib. 1646, 4to. Edinburgh, 1770, 8vo.

Odyſſée, ou Diverſité d'Avantures rencontrées ès Voyages en Europe, Afrique, et Aſie, par Duchâtelet (Dubois). La Flèche, 1645, 4to.

Obſervations de Jean-Claude Flachat, ſur le Commerce, les Arts, les Métiers, l'Economie, et les Finances, faites pendant ſes voyages en Europe, Aſie, et Afrique. Lyons, 1646, 2 vol. 12mo.

Hieronimus Welſchen, Reiſebeſchreibung durch Deutſchland, Italien, Sicilien, Sardinien, Corſica, &c. (Travels in Germany, Italy, Sicily, Sardinia, Corſica, the Iſles in the Mediterranean, Barbary, Egypt, Arabia, and the Promiſed Land; as well as in Spain, France, and the Netherlands: with an account of all the antiquities to be found in theſe countries, and the moſt remarkable objects obſerved in theſe travels both by land and ſea.) Stutgard, 1648, 1658. Berlin, 1658, 4to.

Les Voyages et Obſervations du Sieur Laboulaye-de-Goux, gentilhomme Angevin, où ſont deſcrits les religion, gouvernement, et ſituation des Etats et Royaumes d'Italie, Grèce, Natolie, Syrie, Perſe, Paleſtine, Caramanie, Kaldée, Aſſyrie, Grand-Mogol, Bizapour, Indes-Orientals des Portugais, Arabie, Afrique, Hollande, Grande-Bretagne, Danemarck, Pologne, îles et autres lieux d' Europe, Aſie, et Afrique. Avec figures. Paris, 1657, 4to.

The exactitude and faithfulneſs of theſe travels have been acknowledged. The religion of India, Perſia, &c. forms one of the principal objects of the traveller.

Le Voyage d'Italie et du Levant, de MM. Fermanel, Fauvel, Baudouin, de Launay, et Stokove, contenant la deſcription des royaumes, &c. vie, mœurs, et actions, tant des Italiens que des Turcs, Grecs, Arabes, Arméniens, Mores, Nègres, et autres nations, &c. Rouen, 1665, 4to.; Ib. 1687, 12mo.

Three editions of theſe travels, which contain an account of theſe nations very exact for the time, appeared previouſly at Bruſſels. — The following Obſervations, extending to above 800 pages, and diſfigured by much injudicious erudition, are extracted from the journal of one of the five travellers:

Obſervations ſur le Voyage de MM. Fermanel, &c. Rouen, 1668, 4to.

Le Bouclier de l'Europe, ou la Guerre-Sainte, ou Voyage d'Europe, d'Egypte, de Barbarie, Phénicie, et de la Terre-Sainte, par J. Cappin. Avec figures. Lyons, 1686, 4to.

Journal du Voyage de M. de Monconys, en Portugal, en Provence, en Italie, en Egypte, en Syrie, à Conſtantinople, en Natolie, en Angleterre, dans les Pays-Bays, en Allemagne, en Eſpagne, où les ſavans trouveront un nombre infini de nouveautés en machines de mathématiques, experience de phyſique, curioſités de chimie; outre la deſcription des divers animaux et des plantes rares; les ouvrages des peintres fameux, les coutumes et mœurs des nations, &c. Enrichi de figures, et publié par le Sieur de Lignières, ſon fils. Lyon, 1665 et 1666, 3 vol. 4to.; Paris (Hollande), 1699, 5 vol. 12mo.

The extent of theſe travels, commenced in 1645, are not exaggerated in the title. Their chief objects are rather the ſciences and arts than the deſcription of the countries and nations viſited. The travels in the Eaſt are ſaid to have been undertaken for the purpoſe of tracing the remains of the philoſophy of Mercurius Triſmegiſtus and Zoroaſter.

J. C. von Neitzſchütz, Siebenjœhrige Weltbeſchauung durch Europa, Aſia, und Africa. (Seven years' Travels in Europe, Aſia, and Africa; publiſhed by Chr. Jœger.) Bautzen, 1666. Nuremberg, 1673. Magdeburg, 1753, 4to.

Voyage to Egypt, the Holy-Land, Mount Libanon, Conſtantinople, and the Shores of the Levant. (In Portugueſe.) Liſbon, 1702, 12mo.

Voyage de Paul Lucas au Levant. Avec figures. (Comprenant l'Europe, l'Aſie, et l'Afrique.) Paris, 1702, 2 vol. 12mo.

Voyage de Paul Lucas, fait par l'ordre du Roi, dans la Grèce, l'Aſie-Mineure, la Macédoine, et l'Affrique. Avec figures. Paris, 1712, 2 vol. 12mo.

The labours of this traveller, partly on account of the extraordinary objects he firſt deſcribed, and partly perhaps on account of his inflated diction, were ſuſpected, when they firſt appeared, of exaggeration, but have been in general confirmed by ſubſequent travellers.

Nouveau Voyage de Grèce, d'Afrique, de Paleſtine, d'Italie, de Suiſſe, d'Alſace, et des Pays-Bas, fait depuis 1721 juſqu' en 1729, par C. D. S. Hague, 1724, 12mo.

Mémoires du Chevalier d'Arvieux; contenant ſes voyages à Conſtantinople, à l'Aſie, la Paleſtine, l'Egypte, la Barbarie, &c.; la deſcription de ces pays, la religion, les mœurs, les coutumes, le négoce de ces peuples et leur gouvernement, l'hiſtoire naturelle, et les événemens les plus conſidérables recueillis de ſes mémoires, et mis en ordre par le P. Labat. Paris, 1735, 6 vol. 12mo.

At the commencement of theſe travels, in 1653, M. d'Arvieux was not more than eighteen years of age. He was ſubſequently charged with miſſions to the Porte, and as conſul to Aleppo, Tripoli, and other places in the Eaſt. His reſidence in Barbary, and among the Bedouin Arabs, renders that part of his work peculiarly valuable.

Ludovico Barthema, Itinerario, &c.: tranſlated into Spaniſh by Chriſtoval de Arcos. Seville, 1576, fol.

The ſurname of the traveller is only mentioned in the Italian and Spaniſh copies. There are others in German and Dutch. The work is curious, as monuments, now deſtroyed or damaged, are deſcribed, as well as the manners and cuſtoms of different people now intermingled with each other. The Italian is no doubt the original, though the Latin ſeems to have been printed earlier, as the latter profeſſes to be a tranſlation. In the Bibliothèque des Voyages, the author conjectures this, but does not ſuſpect that he afterwards regiſters the Italian original in the ſame volume. (Vol. i. p. 239, 264.)

A very intereſting work, the reſult of a long reſidence among the Kalmucks. The firſt volume contains letters written during his excurſions in the Stepps, the hiſtory of the flight of the Calmucks in 1771 out of Ruſſia, and ſome of the Mongol tales, called by them Siddi-Kur. The ſecond volume is chiefly occupied by an account of their manners, followed by a memoir on their ſciences, and a collection of anecdotes. The third is to contain an account of their religion. The fourth is to begin with a kind of heroic poem, entitled, "Goh Schekita," and the continuation of his travels is to follow.

The fabulous nature of the greater part of theſe travels is very generally allowed now, and many inaccuracies have been proved.

Hiſtoire de l'Expédition Chrétienne au Royaume de la Chine, entreprinſe par les Pères de la Compagnie de Jéſus, comprinſe en cinq livres, ès quels eſt traité fort exactement et fidèlement des mœurs, loix, et coutumes du pays, des commencemens très-difficiles de l'Egliſe naiſſante en ce royaume, tirée des mémoires du R. P. Matthieu Ricci, par le R. P. Nicolas Trigault Douyſien: traduits en Français par le Sieur D. T. de Riquebourg Trigault. Lille, 1617, 4to.

The ſame, under the title, "Voyages des PP. Jeſuites en Chine." Paris, 1617, 8vo.

This is the moſt ſatisfactory of the accounts hitherto publiſhed by the Jeſuits of China. Father Ricci being well-ſkilled both in the language and in the mathematics, was ordered to make a general geographical map of the world for the Emperor, of which he managed to make China the centre.

Deſcription géographique, hiſtorique, chronologique, politique, et phyſique de l'Empire da la Chine et de la Tartarie Chinoiſe; enrichie des cartes générales et particulières de ce pays, de la carte générale et particulière du Thibet et de la Corée, et ornée d'un grand nombre de figures et de vignettes, par le P. Du Halde. Paris, 1735, 4 vol. fol.—With ſome additions, Hague, 1736, 4 vol. 4to.

This ſtill continues to be the moſt valuable geographical work of the whole of China we poſſeſs. Unfortunately Du Halde's credulity often miſled him. The following work is chiefly founded on his work and that of Lecomte—

General Hiſtory of China, Chineſe Tartary, Corea, and Thibet, drawn from the celebrated work of Du Halde, in which are compriſed all the authentic accounts formerly publiſhed by Louis Lecomte. London, 1741, 4 vol. 8vo.

Bogle, au Boutan et au Thibet, inféré dans un ouvrage Anglais intitulé, "Eſſai ſur l'Hiſtoire, la Religion, les Sciences, et les Mœurs des Hindoux, &c. avec un abrégé de l'état actuel des puiſſances de l'Inde, par M. Crawfurd," et traduit par J. B. L. Billecocq. — Relation de l'entrevue de M. Turner avec le Tachou-Lama, ſuivie d'un voyage au Thibet en 1785, rédigé d'après le récit de Pourungui, par M. Turner, inféré dans les Recherches Aſiatiques; traduit par J. P. Perraud. — Voyage au Thibet, rédigé d'apres le récit de Pourungui par M. Turner, où l'on trouve la deſcription de l'inauguration du Lama. Paris, 1796, 18mo.

An Account of an Embaſſy to the Court of the Lama in Thibet; containing a narrative of a journey through Bootan and part of Thibet, by Samuel Turner: to which are added, Views taken on the place, by Samuel Davis, Lieut.; and Obſervations botanical, mineralogical, and medical, by R. Saunders. London, 1800, 4to.

This is, without compariſon, the moſt valuable work that has yet appeared on Thibet; but it is to be regretted that the author could not advance further into the country.

Voyage de François Pyrard de Laval; contenant ſa navigation aux Indes-Orientales, aux Maldives, Molucques, au Bréſil, &c.; avec la deſcription des pays, mœurs, façons de faire, police, et gouvernement; du trafic et commerce qui s'y fait, des animaux, arbres, fruits, et autres ſingularités; diviſé en deux parties, avec un petit dictionnaire de la langue des Maldives. Paris, 1613, 2 vol. 8vo.; 3d. edit., Ib. 1619. 2 vol. 8vo.; Ib. 1679, 4to.

The laſt edition is moſt eſteemed. Of the ancient travellers in India, Pyrard, who ſet out in 1600, and returned in 1611, is one of the moſt accurate and intelligent. His deſcriptions are conciſe and neat, and his accuracy has not been impeached. The account he gives of the Maldives continues the beſt we have, and that of Bengal, Cochin, Travancore, and Calicut are of great value; his remarks on Ceylon, the Iſles of Sunda and the Moluccas, are more rapid, but thoſe on the Brazils, though ſhort, are full of curious matter.

Deſcriptio veteris Grœnlandiæ, a Thormodo Torfœo. Copenhagen, 1705, 8vo.

Hiſtoria Winlandiæ antiquæ, ejuſd. Copenhagen, 1706, 8vo.

Of theſe very valuable and learned works, the latter refers to the Icelandic diſcovery of a part of America, probably Labrador or Newfoundland, which they coloniſed for a long period.

Hans Egede, Det gamle Groenlands nye perluſtration eller Naturel Hiſtorie og Beſkrivelſe ofver det Gamle Groenlands ſituation, luft, temperament, &c. (Old-Greenland newly illuſtrated, or Natural Hiſtory and Deſcription of Old-Greenland's ſituation, climate, temperature, &c.) St. Domingo.

Hiſtoire de l'Iſle-Eſpagnole, ou de Saint-Domingue, écrite particulièrement ſur les mémoires manuſcrits du P. I. B. Pers, miſſionaire, et ſur les pièces originales qui ſe conſervent au dépôt de la marine. Par le P. Charlevoix, Jeſuite. Avec cartes et vignettes. Paris, 1722, 2 vol 4to.; Amſterdam, 1733, 4 vol. 12mo.

This is a ſuperior work to moſt of thoſe founded on the accounts of the Jeſuits, as the editor has omitted details merely miſſionary. This is the beſt of the author's works, and with regard to the Spaniſh part of the iſland continues to be the moſt ſatisfactory account we have. As natural hiſtory was much neglected by him, the following forms a uſeful ſupplement to it:—

Eſſai ſur l'Hiſtoire naturelle de Saint-Domingue. (Par le P. Nicolſon.) Paris, 1776, 8vo.

Loix et Conſtitutions des Colonies Françaiſes Sous-le-Vent; ſuivies, 1°, d'un tableau raiſonné des différentes parties de l'adminiſtration actuelle de ces colonies; 2°, d'obſervations générales ſur le climat, la population, la culture, le caractère, les mœurs des habitans de la partie Françaiſe de Saint Domingue; 3°, d'un deſcription phyſique, politique, et géographique des differens quartiers de cette même partie: le tout terminé par l'hiſtoire de cette île et de ſes dépendances, depuis leur découverte juſqu'à ce jour. Paris, 1784, 1785, 4 vol. 4to.

Voyage à Saint-Domingue, dans les années 1788, 1789, et 1790, par le Baron de Wimpfen. Paris, 1793, 2 vol. 8vo. In Engliſh; London, 1794, 8vo.

Deſcription topographique et politique de la partie Eſpagnole de l'île de Saint-Domingue, par M. Moreau de Sainte Méry. En Anglais et en Français. Philadelphia, 2 vol. 8vo.

Deſcription de la partie Français de l'île de Saint-Domingue. En Anglais et en Français. Par le même. Ib. 1797, 2 vol. 4to.

Hiſtorical Survey of the French Colony of St. Domingo. By Bryan Edwards. London, 1797, 4to.

This work was reprinted in the author's Hiſtory of the Weſt-Indies. In the French tranſlation of the hiſtorical part, by T. B. I. Breton. (Paris, an xi. 1803,) the hiſtory is continued to the latter date.

Voyage par Terre de St. Domingo au Cap François. Par Soulaſtre. Paris, 1809, 8vo.

Relacion du Voyage de la mer du Sud aux côtes de Pérou et du Chili, fait pendant les années 1712, 1713, et 1714. Par M. Frezier, ingenieur du Roi. Paris, 1716; Ib. 1732, 4to.—Tranſlated into Engliſh, with a poſtſcript by Edmund Halley, on the ſettlement, commerce, and riches of the Jeſuits in Paraguay. London, 1717, 4to.

This is a very intereſting deſcription of Peru, and contains the firſt good account of Chili.

Voyage de Marſeille à Lima, et dans d'autres parties des Indes orientales. Par D (Duret.) Avec figures. Paris, 1720, 12mo.

Peru occupies the moſt extenſive part of this book.

La Figure de la Terre déterminée par les obſervations de M. M. Bouguer, et de la Condamine, de l'Academie des Sciences, envoyés par ordre du Roi au Pérou, pour obſerver aux environs de l'équateur; avec une relation abrégée de ce voyage, qui contient la deſcription du pays dans lequel les opérations ont été faites. Paris, 1749, 4to.

A very judicious account of Peru is contained in this work.

Relaçion hiſtorica del viage hecho de orden de Su Majeſtad para medir algunos grados del meridiano terreſtre, &c. (Hiſtorical Account of a Voyage performed by order of His Majeſty, to meaſure certain degrees of the terreſtrial meridian, and thereby to attain a true knowledge of the figure and magnitude of the earth; with other Aſtronomical and Phyſical Obſervations.) By Don George Juan, and Antonio de Ulloa. Madrid, 1748—1749, 2 vol. 8vo.—In French, tranſlated by Dumanville. Amſterdam, 1752; Paris, 1752, 2 vol. 4to.—In Engliſh. By Adams. London, 1758; Ib. 1775, 2 vol. 8vo.

The Engliſh tranſlation of this valuable work, is in point of plates and tables of very little value to that in French. Ulloa, who was the chief author, has deſcribed Peru and Chili more particularly than New Granada.

Nouveau Voyage fait au Pérou par M. l'abbé Court de la Blanchardière, auquel on a joint une deſcription des anciennes mines d'Eſpagne. Traduite de del'Eſpagnol d'Alonzo Cenillo. Avec figures. Paris, 1751, 12mo.
